TO

THE RIGHT HONORABLE

SIR GEORGE JESSEL,

MASTER OF THE ROLLS,

THE

Following Work

BY EXPRESS PERMISSION,

MOST RESPECTFULLY DEDICATED.

P R E F A C E.

EVERY person who has had practical experience as a lawyer, divides his professional knowledge into two distinct heads, namely:—first, his habitual knowledge—that knowledge of the rules of law which is laid up in his memory, so that whenever he has reason to apply those rules they are accurately recalled without external aid; and secondly, his knowledge of the storehouses, so to speak, where he can get the actual knowledge of any branch of law of which he is uncertain. Now of storehouses of law we have an ample supply. Putting aside the various digests, no works could well be more complete and detailed than Mr. Dart's Book on Vendors and Purchasers, Mr. Jarman's on Wills, Mr. Chitty's on Contracts, Mr. Addison's on Torts, Mr. Justice Lindley's on Partnership, and last, but far from least, Mr. Lewin's Model Treatise on Trusts. Again, we have smaller but singularly complete summaries of case law in Mr. Roscoe's Nisi Prius Evidence, and Mr. Watson's excellent Compendium of Equity, a book which ought to be in the hands of every practical lawyer.

But although the law libraries are rich in great works of reference, such as those above referred to,

they are comparatively poor in manuals giving a systematic view of those principles of the law—the oases in “the wilderness of single instances”—with which every lawyer ought to be mentally furnished.

As has been well said by our most eminent living jurist (a), “it becomes obvious, that if a lawyer is to have anything better than a familiarity with indexes, he must gain his knowledge in some other way than from existing books on the subject. No doubt such knowledge is to be gained. Experience gives by degrees, in favourable cases, a comprehensive acquaintance with the principles of the law with which a practitioner is conversant. He gets to see that it is shorter and simpler than it looks, and to understand that the innumerable cases which at first sight appear to constitute the law, are really no more than illustrations of a comparatively small number of principles.”

The want above indicated has been of late years somewhat met by the publication of such works as Sir Fitzjames Stephens’ Digests of Evidence and the Criminal Law, Mr. Vaughan Hawkins’ handy treatise on Wills, Mr. Farwell’s work on Powers, and Mr. Pollock’s on Partnership; the writers of which have with success and ability presented to their readers the principles of those several branches of the law in a distinct and accurate manner.

(a) Sir Fitzjames Stephens, Dig. Evidence, VI.

It has been my endeavour in this volume to perform in a humble way the same task in relation to the Law of Private Trusts. Every student has now-a-days to show himself acquainted with the subject, and has to depend upon those manuals of general equity, which are necessarily very elementary, and do not appear to me to draw a sufficient distinction between principle and illustration.

Again, the law of Trusts is the one branch of Equity, of the principles of which a solicitor ought to have an habitual and accurate knowledge; for not only is he continually called upon to give off-hand advice to trustees, but he is frequently a trustee himself. So far as I know, there is no work of moderate size which will give him an accurate knowledge of the principles which ought to guide him; and I fancy, that in the heat and worry of general practice but few have the time or the inclination to study (not merely read) a large volume on this one of the many branches of law upon which they have to advise their clients. A person of ordinary industry and capacity may easily learn the 76 Articles of this Work, and may, without great effort, remember the main facts of such of the illustrative cases as are what may be called "leading;" and when he has done so I feel no doubt that he will possess such a knowledge of the principles upon which the court acts with regard to Private Trusts, as will enable him to answer without hesitation all such questions as occur in the every-day experience of a general practitioner.

With regard to the typography I would mention that the words printed in heavy type (or clarendon) are those which are the key to the nature of the example in which they occur, so that by casting the eye over a page in search of an example, it may by this means be readily found.

ARTHUR UNDERHILL.

Concise Manual

OF THE LAW RELATING TO

PRIVATE TRUSTS.

ART. 1.—Definitions.

IN this manual, the following terms are used with the meanings assigned to them in the subsequent paragraphs, namely:—

A trust means an obligation under which some person is bound, or has bound himself, to deal with the beneficial interest in real or personal property which is vested in him, in a particular manner and for a particular purpose, either wholly in favour of another or others, or partially in favour of another or others conjointly with himself (a).

(a) I can cite no authority for this definition. Mr. Lewin adopts Lord Coke's definition of a use, namely, "A confidence reposed in some other, not issuing out of the land, but as a thing collateral, annexed in privity to the estate of the land, for which cestui que trust has no remedy but by subpoena in chancery." Co. Lit. 272 b. This definition would seem to be applicable to real estate only, and certainly not to trusts of choses in action, the equities attaching to which are, generally speaking, not merely collateral. The expression "some other," is also apt to mislead, and to convey the impression that the trustee must be some other than either the settlor or the cestui que trust, whereas, as will be seen further on, such an impression would be incorrect. Then, so far as the remedy is concerned, the definition is obsolete. The Court of Chancery no longer exists, and all branches of the High Court take cognizance of equitable rights, although the duty to perform, except to convey to the cestuis que trust.

An executive trustee is the trustee appointed to carry out a special trust.

In relation to their inception, trusts are divisible into two classes (f).

α. A declared or express trust means a trust created by words either expressly or impliedly evincing an intention to create a trust in respect of certain property, for a particular purpose.

β. A constructive trust means a trust which is not created by any words either expressly or impliedly evincing a direct intention to create a trust, but by the construction of equity, in order to satisfy the demands of justice (g).

In relation to their construction and enforcement, trusts are divisible into two classes.

α. An executed trust means a trust in which the limitations of the estate of the trustee and the cestuis que trust are perfected and declared by the settlor (h).

β. An executory trust means a trust in which the limitations of the estate of the trustee or of the cestui que trust are not perfected and declared by the settlor, but only certain instructions or heads of settlement declared by him, from which the trustee is subsequently to model, perfect and declare the trust (i).

A trust based upon value means a trust created by (f) This classification seems to me to be preferable to that usually adopted of express, implied, and constructive trusts. Independently of the fact that it is generally immaterial by what name you call a trust, I have ventured to disregard the usual classification, because implied trusts, properly so called, are in reality constructive trusts, and implied trusts, loosely so called (as, for instance, trusts created by precatory words), are in reality declared trusts.

the settlor, upon such consideration as would support a contract at law.

ILLUST.—1. A trust of leasehold property to which liabilities are attached is always based upon value, inasmuch as the cestui que trust thereby takes upon himself the primary discharge of those liabilities (k).

2. Where there are mutual promises, each is a valuable consideration for the other. Thus it is settled, that if husband and wife, each of them having interests, no matter how much, or of what degree or of what quality, come to an agreement which is afterwards embodied in a settlement, that is a bargain between husband and wife, which is not a transaction without valuable consideration (l).

A voluntary trust means a trust created by the settlor either ex meri motu or in consideration of a mere moral obligation or natural love and affection (m), or a trust made to take effect by way of remainder, after satisfaction of a trust based upon value and not coming within the scope of the contract (n) upon which the latter was founded.

ILLUST.—1. In general, in a marriage settlement by an intended husband, where there are the usual life estates to himself and wife with remainder to the issue and in default of issue to the settlor's next of kin, the latter limitation is voluntary, because it cannot be presumed that the benefit of the husband's next of kin out of his property was within the scope of the bargain for the settlement made between him and the wife (o).

(m) See Eastwood v. Kenyon, 11 A. & E. 447; Beaumont v. Reeve, 8 Q. B. 483; Tweddle v. Atkinson, 1 B. & S. 393; Jeffry v. Jeffry, 1 Cr. & Ph. 138; and Moore

v. Crofton, 3 J. & Lat. 43.

(n) Osgood v. Strode, 2 P. W. 245 (overruling Jenkins v. Kemesh, 2 P. W. 252, and Hale v. Lambe, 2 Ed. 292); Johnson v. Legard, 3 Mad. 283, and T. & R. 66, 281; Stackpoole v. Stackpoole, 4 Dr. & War. 320; Smith v. Cherril, L. R., 4 Eq. 390; Wollaston v. Tribe, L. R., 9 Eq. 44.

(o) See Dart, V. & P. 894.

2. But where the presumption can naturally arise that the ultimate limitation was part of the marriage bargain, it is apprehended (in spite of some authorities to the contrary (p)) that it is not then voluntary. Thus, in Clarke v. Wright (q), Blackburn, J., said, “It seems to me, that though in general it may be supposed that on a marriage treaty, after the interest of the intended husband and wife and the issue of the marriage is provided for, the remainder of the estate is left to be disposed of as the party to whom that would revert pleases; yet that when we find the interests of the husband, wife, and issue so much affected by the settlement, we must take it that it was agreed by all parties, as part of the marriage bargain, that the estate should be thus settled—that the wife agreed to marry the husband on the terms that this settlement should be thus made. If this be so, the question comes to be, if a limitation in favour of a third person, not merely inserted in the marriage settlement, but appearing from its nature to have been made one of the terms of the marriage bargain, is to be considered voluntary, or is to be considered as made for the valuable consideration of marriage? In my opinion the case would have been the same if the plaintiff had been some distant relation of the wife’s first husband, or even a stranger in blood. The husband got the enjoyment of some part of the wife’s property, which he could not have had if the marriage had not taken place. He may have got this on cheaper terms; he may have been allowed to take a larger portion of her personal estate than he would have been permitted to take if this settlement had not been made; or he may have been allowed to keep free a greater portion of his own property than he would otherwise have done, and in consideration of these substantial benefits to himself he may have become a party to a contract for this limitation. . . .

(p) Wollaston v. Tribe, L. R., 4 Eq. 390.
 9 Eq. 44; Johnson v. Legard, T. (q) 30 L. J., Ex. (Ex. Ch.)
 & R. 66, 281; Smith v. Cheril, 115, and 6 H. & N. 849.

It seems to me, that as on every marriage settlement there are reciprocal considerations between husband and wife, we ought not to hold a limitation, which is not merely included in the marriage settlement, but appears from its nature to have been really one of the terms of the marriage bargain, to be voluntary.”

3. And so where a widow or widower on a second marriage makes provision for the children of a first marriage, as well as for those of the second marriage, it is presumed to be within the scope and object of the marriage bargain, and therefore based upon value (r).

4. And so generally, it is laid down by Mr. Dart (s), in a passage approved of by the present Lord Blackburn and the late Mr. Justice Willes (t), that where the limitations over are in favour of the collateral relatives, not of the settlor but of the other party, the settlement may be considered primâ facie evidence of such other party having stipulated for their insertion. And so where on a settlement of an intended wife's estate, the limitations over are in favour of her own collateral relatives, in derogation of the husband's marital rights. But where in other cases the limitations over are in favour of the collateral relatives of the settlor, such presumption cannot so readily arise; but it might be proved that the other parties stipulated for their insertion. If such a stipulation cannot be presumed or proved, the limitations over must, it is conceived, be considered voluntary.

A breach of trust means any act or neglect on the part of a trustee, which is not authorized or excused, either by the settlement or by the doctrines of judicial equity.

SUB-DIVISION II.

THE CREATION OF DECLARED TRUSTS.

ART. 3.—Language declaratory of a Trust.

No technical expressions are necessary in order to raise a trust (a); any will suffice, from which it is clear that the settlor intended to create a trust, or to confer a benefit best carried out by means of a trust, provided that the objects, the property, and the way it shall go, are clearly pointed out (b). And subject to this proviso, the following principles are of importance in construing a settlor's intentions:—

α . Words of confidence, direction, subjection (c), or proviso (d), in general raise a trust;

β . Where a settlor empowers a person to dispose of property in favour of another in a particular event (e), or among a class, or some of a class, and there is no gift over in default of appointment, a general intention to benefit such individual or class will be presumed and the power will be construed as a trust (f).

γ . When property is given to one, who is by the donor recommended or requested to dispose of it in favour of another, these words create a trust. Subject to this, that if the donee was to have a discretion, or if there are expressions in the settlement inconsistent with the words being imperative, or if they were merely explanatory of the donor's motive, or words of mere expectation, or if it is otherwise collected, that they were not intended to be imperative, no trust will be created (g).

ILLUST.—1. A. gives property to B., and directs him to apply it for the benefit of C.; B. is held to be a mere trustee for C. (h).

2. If an estate be given to A., he paying the testator's debts within twelve months from the testator's death, the words of subjection or condition are not construed to impose a legal forfeiture on breach, but are viewed as declaratory of trusts (i). Where, however, the words are merely declaratory of a legal obligation which would attach in their absence, they do not, it is apprehended, raise any trust. For instance, if a house be devised to A. for life, "he keeping the same in repair," no trust is created, for it is merely an informal affirmation of the common law obligation not to suffer permissive waste (k).

3. If a testator direct his realty to be sold, or charge it with debts and legacies (l), or a particular legacy (m), the legal estate may descend to the heir, or it may descend to the devisee; but the court will view the direction as a declaration of trust, and will force the legal owner to carry it into execution (n).

4. The leading illustration of the class of cases coming under the principle contained in Sub-article β is Burrough v. Philcox (o). There a testator directed that certain stock should stand in his name, and certain real estates remain unalienated, “until the following contingencies are completed.” He then proceeded to give life estates to his children with remainder to their issue, and declared that if his children should both die without issue, the properties should be disposed of as after mentioned,—namely, the survivor of his children should have power to dispose by will of the said real and personal estate amongst the testator’s nephews and nieces, or their children, either all to one of them, or to as many of them as his, the testator’s, surviving child should think proper. It was held that a trust was created in favour of the testator’s nephews and nieces, and their children, subject only to a power of selection and distribution; Lord Cottenham saying, “Where there appears a general intention in favour of a class, and a particular intention in favour of individuals of a class to be selected by another person, and the particular intention fails from that selection not being made, the court will carry into effect the general intention in favour of the class.”

5. And so where a testator gave personalty to his widow for life, and to be at her disposal by her will, “therewith to apply part for charity, the remainder to be at her disposal among my relations, in such proportions as she may be pleased to direct,” and the widow died without so disposing of the property, it was held that half the property was in trust for charitable purposes, and the residue for the testator’s relatives, according to the Statutes of Distribution (p).

6. A testator gives his trustees power, if his daughter marries with their consent, to appoint part of her fortune, on her death, to her husband. This power is equivalent to a trust in favour of a husband who marries the daughter with the trustees’ consent (q).

(p) Salisbury v. Denton, 3 K. & J. 529; Little v. Neil, 10 W. R. 592; Gough v. Butt, 16 Sim. 45.

7. A testator bequeaths property to A., and states, either that he “hopes and doubts not” (r), “entreats” (s), “recommends” (t), “desires” (u), “requests” (v), or “well knows” (w), that it will be applied for the benefit of B. In such case a trust would be created in favour of B., unless the property, or the mode of its application for B.’s benefit, were ambiguously or insufficiently stated, or unless a discretion were given to A. whether he should or should not apply it for B.’s benefit, or unless it were expressed to be given to A. “absolutely,” or accompanied by words to that effect.

8. But where there are other inconsistent expressions, the precatory words will not be construed as imperative. Thus in Green v. Marsden (x), a testator gave certain shares of freehold and leasehold houses to his wife for her sole use and benefit, begging and requesting that at her death she would give and bequeath the same in such shares as she should think proper, and unto such members of her own family as she should think most deserving of the same. He also gave her all his moneys in the funds, and all the money he might be entitled to, for her sole use and benefit (y), begging and requesting that at her death she would give and bequeath what should be remaining, in such shares as she should think proper, unto such members of her own and his family that she should think most deserving. It was held, that both as to the freeholds and leaseholds, and also the money, there was no trust created, but the wife took absolutely. The Vice-Chancellor said: "He gives it her for her sole use; that does not mean her separate use in the technical sense, but it means that she should have the absolute use and enjoyment,—that the property should be for the benefit of her, and of no other person than her. . . . In the bequest of the specific portion, he uses the words "which shall be remaining at her death." What does that mean? What he means is this,—the widow is to have it for her own sole use and benefit, that she may do as she pleases with it, that she may spend it, or give it away, or bequeath it; but he expresses his wish, not imperatively, but desiring that she may know his wish, as to what she should do with what remains."

9. The case of Lechmere v. Lavie (z) exemplifies the last clause of the article now under consideration as regards the words being merely expectant, and also the rules as to certainty in the property. There a testatrix said in her will: "I hope none of my children will accuse me of partiality in having left the largest share of my property to my two eldest daughters, my sole motive for which is to enable them to keep house so long as they remain single; but in case of their marrying, I have divided it amongst all my children. If they die single, of course they will leave what they have amongst their brothers and sisters, or their children." The eldest of the two daughters died leaving all her property to the second. The second died leaving her property otherwise than in accordance with her mother's will. Upon this state of facts, Sir J. Leach, M. R., said: "I consider the words of this codicil as words expressing the expectation of the testatrix, but not as words of recommendation, or as intended to create an obligation upon the two eldest daughters. The words apply, not simply to the property given by the testatrix, but to all property which the daughters might happen to possess at their deaths, leaving what she gives by her will at their disposition during their lives, and extending to property which might never have belonged to her, and wanting altogether certainty of amount.”

10. So in the leading case of Knight v. Knight (a), the words were: “I trust to the liberality of my successors to reward any others of my old servants and tenants according to their deserts, and to their justice in continuing the estates in the male succession, according to the will of the founder of the family, my grandfather.” Lord Langdale, M. R., held, that these words were not sufficiently imperative, and that the subject intended to be affected, and the interests intended to be enjoyed by the objects, were not sufficiently defined to create trusts, either in favour of the servants and tenants or of the male line (b).

11. In McCormick v. Grogan (c), C. made a will leaving the whole of his property to G., whom he also appointed his executor. When about to die, C. sent for G., and in a private interview told him of the will, and on G.’s asking whether that was right, said he would not have it otherwise. C. then told G. where the will was to be found, and that with it would be found a letter. This was all that was known to have passed between the parties. The letter named a great many persons to whom C. wished sums of money to be given, and annuities to be paid, but it contained several expressions as to G. carrying into effect the intentions of the testator as he “might think best,” and also this sentence, “I do not wish you to act strictly on the foregoing instructions, but leave it entirely to your own good judgment to do as you think I would if living, and as the parties are deserving; and as it is not my wish that you should say anything about this document, there cannot be any fault found with you by any of the parties, should you not act in strict accordance with it." G. paid the money to some of the persons mentioned in the letter, but not to others, who accordingly sued him; but it was held that there was no trust created binding on G.

12. A legacy is given to a father "the better to enable him to bring up his children." No trust is thereby created, for such words are not imperative, but only explanatory of the donor's motive (d). But where, on the other hand, there is a bequest of income to A., "that he may use it for the benefit of himself, and the maintenance and education of his children," it has been held that a trust was intended to be imposed upon A. to maintain and educate his children (e). It is, however, apprehended, that the courts would not in these days hold that such words constitute a trust, as the current of modern decisions tends against construing mere precatory words as imperative (f).

OBS.—In order to obviate any confusion in the reader's mind, I think it well at this place to draw his attention to the fact that he must carefully distinguish between cases in which (as in the foregoing) it has been held that the precatory words are not imperative, and raise no trusts at all, and cases in which the words actually used, or the surrounding circumstances, make it clear that although the donor has not sufficiently specified the property, the objects and the way it shall go, yet he never meant the donee to take the entire beneficial interest. In such cases, which are treated of in Division II., a constructive trust is created in favour of the donor or his representatives.

call on the trustee to execute (b); and so, even though he be not made a party, if the debtor has given him notice of the existence of the deed, and has expressly or impliedly told him that he may look to the trust property for payment of his demand, the creditor may become a cestui que trust (c) if he has been thereby induced to a forbearance in respect of his claims, which he would not otherwise have exercised (d), or if he has assented to the deed, and has actively, and not merely passively, acquiesced in it, or acted under its provisions and complied with its terms, and the other side expresses no dissatisfaction, but not otherwise (e).

2. So, where there was an assignment of property to trustees upon trust to pay all costs, charges, and expenses of the deed, and other incidental charges and expenses of the trust, and to reimburse themselves, and then to pay over the residue to third parties, it was held, that a solicitor who had prepared the deed, and had acted as solicitor to the trustees, was not a cestui que trust. It was not that the trust did not provide for the costs, or that they were not to be paid, but simply that the solicitor was not a cestui que trust under the trust for the payment of them; the trust might of course be enforced, but not by the solicitor (f). It is obvious that the principle also excludes from the benefit of a trust all persons who are merely auxiliary to the real object of the trust, as for instance, auctioneers, valuers, solicitors, and other persons carrying out a sale, although the trust instrument contains a trust for payment of costs and expenses.

3. But where there is a positive direction to the trustees to employ a particular person and to allow him a salary, a trust is created in his favour (g); a mere recommendation or expression of desire is, however, not sufficient (h) for this purpose.

ART. 5.—Formalities immaterial where Trusts based on Value or declared by Will.

Where a trust is based upon value, or is created by will (a), it is immaterial whether it is in its nature complete and executed, or merely rests in contract, and whether the settlor has declared himself or another a trustee, or has omitted to appoint any trustee; for equity will never allow a trust to fail for want of a trustee, but will, if the settlor has used language sufficiently explicit to enable the court to gather his intentions, fasten the trust upon the estate, and will hold the person in whom it becomes vested to be bound in conscience to perform the trust, unless he be a purchaser for value and without notice (b).

ILLUST.—1. Thus where a marriage settlement contains a covenant by the intended husband that he will duly vest in, and transfer to, the trustees; any property which may accrue to him in right of his wife during the marriage, upon any property so becoming vested in him, he immediately becomes a trustee of it, in the first place, upon trust to transfer it to the trustees, and until that is done he himself holds it upon the trust declared in the settlement (c); so that, not only is there an action for breach of covenant maintainable against him, but the actual property is burdened and charged with the executory trust (d), and any volunteer taking it would take it burdened with that trust; and so would a purchaser if he had notice of the trust, as will be seen hereafter.

2. And so if lands be devised (e), or money bequeathed (f), to a married woman for her separate use, the property vests at law in the husband; but in equity he holds it upon trust for the separate use of the wife.

3. So if the trustee appointed, fails, either by death (g), or disclaimer (h), or incapacity (i), or otherwise (k), the trust does not fail, but fastens upon the conscience of any person (other than a purchaser for value without notice) into whose hands the property comes (l).

α . By actually declaring that he himself holds it for the purposes of the trust (b); β . By plainly evincing an intention (as distinguished from an expressed declaration) to constitute himself a trustee in præsenti, and not merely an intention to create a trust in futuro; which intention may be inferred by looking at the nature of the transaction, the whole of the transaction, and any other evidence tending to show that he considered that he actually was a trustee of the property, and adopted that character, as distinguished from evidence tending to show that he considered that he had made an actual gift of the property (c); or γ . By transferring his entire interest, legal or equitable, in the property to a trustee, or doing all in his power to transfer it to a trustee for the purposes of the settlement (d).

ILLUST.—1. In Jeffries v. Jeffries (e), a father voluntarily conveyed freeholds to trustees upon certain trusts in favour of his daughters, and also covenanted to surrender copyholds to the use of the trustees, to be held by them upon the trusts of the settlement. The settlor afterwards died without surrendering the copyholds, having devised certain portions of both freeholds and copyholds to his wife. Upon a suit by the daughters to have a settlement enforced, it was held, that the court would carry out the settlement of the freeholds, for with respect to them the trust was executed, the title of the daughters complete, and the property actually transferred to the trustees; but that it would not decree a surrender of the copyholds, for with respect to them the settlor had neither declared himself a trustee nor had he transferred them to the trustees, but had merely entered into a voluntary contract to transfer them, which, being a nudum pactum, was of no greater validity in equity than at law. It will be borne in mind, that not only was there no evidence that the settlor considered that he had constituted himself a trustee, but the fact that he assumed to deal with the property in his will was of itself strong evidence to the contrary.

2. In Gilbert v. Overton (f), A., having an agreement for a lease, executed a voluntary settlement, assigning all his interest in the agreement to trustees, upon certain trusts. It was objected that he had not declared himself a trustee, nor intended to declare himself one, and had not conveyed the leasehold premises to the trustees; but Vice-Chancellor Wood said: "In the inception of this transaction, there is nothing to show that the settlor had the power of obtaining a lease, before the time when he did so, after the execution of the settlement. There is, therefore, nothing to show that the settlor did not by the settlement do all that it was in his power to do to pass the property."

3. In Kekewich v. Manning (g), residuary personal estate was bequeathed to a mother for life, with remainder to her daughter absolutely. The daughter on her marriage assigned all her interest under the will to trustees upon certain trusts, not material to be stated, with a final trust in favour of her nieces. Assuming that, quâ the nieces, the settlement was voluntary, it was held that it was good, on the ground that the daughter had done all she could do to divest herself of her interest under the will; for she had a mere equitable remainder, and the only way in which she could transfer that was by assignment. If she had been the legal owner of the funds, it would have been necessary for her to transfer it in the proper way in the books of the bank; but not being the legal owner, she did all that she could do (h).

4. In Jones v. Lock (i), the facts were as follows:—The alleged settlor had children by a first wife, and one son, an infant, by a second wife. One day returning from a journey, the infant's nurse said, "You have come back from Birmingham, and have not brought baby anything;" upon which the alleged settlor said, "Oh! I gave him a pair of boots, and now I will give him a handsome present." He then went up stairs and brought down a cheque which he had received for 900*l.*, and said, "Look you here, I give this to baby; it is for himself; I am going to put it away for him, and will give him a great deal more with it; it is his own, and he may do what he likes with it." He then put the cheque away. He had previously told his solicitor that he intended adding 100*l.* to the cheque, and investing it for the infant's benefit. A few days after the above, he suddenly died, leaving the child penniless. The child's mother contended, that the settlor had made a valid declaration of trust in favour of the child, but Lord Cranworth said, "I regret to say that I cannot bring myself to think, either on principle or authority, there has been any gift or any valid declaration of trust. No doubt a gift may be made by any person, sui juris and compos mentis, by conveyance of real estate, or by delivery of a chattel, and there is no doubt also that, by some decisions, a parol declaration of trust of personalty may be perfectly valid, even when voluntary. If I give any chattel, that of course passes by delivery; and if I say, expressly or impliedly, that I constitute myself a trustee of personalty, that is a trust executed and capable of being enforced without consideration. The cases all turn upon the question whether what has been said was a declaration of trust or an imperfect gift. In the latter case the parties would receive no aid from a court of equity if they claimed as volunteers. But when there has been a declaration of trust, then it will be enforced, whether there has been consideration or not."

5. In Antrobus v. Smith (k), the alleged settlor made the following endorsement on a share held by him in a public company: "I do hereby assign to my daughter B. all my right, title and interest of and in the enclosed call, and all other calls, in the F. and C. Navigation." The share was not handed over to the daughter, and the endorsement did not operate as a valid assignment of the share; but it was attempted to enforce the assignment by contending that the endorsement operated as a valid declaration of trust. The court, however, rejected this view, the Master of the Rolls saying: "Mr. Crawford (the alleged settlor) was not in form declared a trustee, nor was that mode of doing what he proposed in his contemplation. . . . He meant a gift, and there is no case in which a party has been compelled to perfect a gift which in the mode of making it he has left imperfect (l).

Obs.—In Richardson v. Richardson (m), Vice-Chancellor Wood (afterwards Lord Hatherley), and in Morgan v. Malleson (n), Lord Romilly, did not follow the principle contained in the last sentence, and the former very learned judge said: "An instrument executed as a present and complete assignment, not being a mere covenant to (k) 12 Ves. 39.

(l) It would seem that there is an exception, or a seeming exception, to this principle in the case of husband and wife. In Grant v. Grant, 34 B. 623, the Master of the Rolls said: "I apprehend the fact of the transaction taking place between husband and wife instead of between strangers makes no difference further than this, that in the case of a gift of chattels from one stranger to another, there must be a delivery of the chattels in order to make the gift complete, whereas in the case of husband and wife there cannot be a delivery, because, assuming they are given to the wife, they still remain in the legal custody of the husband.

the court will not hold the intended transfer to operate as a declaration of trust" (q). The decision also seems to be inconsistent with Lord Cranworth's judgment in Jones v. Lock (r), and it is respectfully submitted that, both on principle and authority, the law as laid down by the Master of the Rolls in Richards v. Delbridge is accurate.

6. In Ex parte Dubosc (s), the alleged settlor wrote to an agent in Paris, authorizing him to purchase, and the agent accordingly did purchase, an annuity for the benefit of a lady whom he named, but as the lady was married, and also deranged, the annuity was purchased in the name of the settlor. The settlor then sent the agent a power of attorney, authorizing him to transfer the annuity to the lady, which he did not do till after the settlor's death. It was nevertheless held, that the settlor had considered himself a mere trustee for the lady, and had never intended the annuity for himself, but for her, and that therefore the trust was good.

7. On the other hand, in Smith v. Ward (t), letters, which would have raised a declaration of trust, were held to have been explained away by the acts of the settlor, those acts showing that down to his death he considered the property as his own.

ART. 7.—The Trust Property.

settlor from parting with the beneficial interest in such property.

ILLUST.—1. In Gilbert v. Overton (b), a settlor, holding an agreement for a lease, assigned all his interest under such agreement to trustees upon certain trusts. The legal estate was never assigned to trustees. Held, that the settlement was complete, and ought to be carried into execution. V.-C. Page Wood, in giving judgment, said: “It appears to me that there are several reasons for upholding the settlement. In the first place, it contains a declaration of trust, and that is all that is wanted to make any settlement effectual. The settlor conveys his equitable interest, and directs the trustees to hold it upon the trusts thereby declared ” (c).

2. In Shafto v. Adams (d), the plaintiff had settled upon his wife and children certain real estate, to which, under the will of his uncle, he was entitled in reversion. Held good.

3. In Wethered v. Wethered (e), an agreement was entered

(c) Prior to the Judicature Act, 1873, debts, and other legal choses in action, were not assignable at law, on the ground (as put by Lord Coke) that it “would be the occasion of multiplying of contentions and suits, of great oppression of the people, and the subversion of the due and equal execution of justice” (10 Co. 48). But even at law, negotiable instruments (as debentures, bills of exchange and promissory notes made negotiable) were exceptions to the rule; and so were all contracts where a novation took place, that is to say, where both parties to the original contract assented to the transfer of the interest of one of them (Buron v. Husband, 4 B. & Ad. 611). Equity, however, almost always, from its earliest days, disregarded the legal doctrine, and freely enforced contracts for the sale of chose in action; and now, by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 6, contingent and future interests and possibilities, coupled with an interest in real estate, may be granted or assigned at law. By 30 & 31 Vict. c. 144, policies of life assurance may be legally assigned, and by 31 & 32 Vict. c. 86, a similar relaxation of the law was introduced in favour of marine policies; and finally, by the 6th section of the Judicature Act, 1873, debts and other legal choses in action may be assigned at law, where the assignment is absolute and not by way of charge only.

into between two sons, to divide equally whatever property they might receive from their father in his lifetime, or become entitled to under his will, or by descent, or otherwise. It was held that this agreement was binding, although made in respect of a mere possibility, and V.-C. Shadwell said: "It is clear that if the testator meant that his devisee should have the personal enjoyment of his bounty, he might so devise as to stint the enjoyment of the devisee, and restrain him from alienating the subject of the gift; but that if the testator did not so devise, it must be intended that he meant that his devisee should not be so stinted, but should have the full enjoyment of the property, and that it should be liable to all his antecedent debts and all his antecedent contracts; and, therefore, that where there was a general devise the property was liable to be encumbered in any way that the devisee might think proper, either before or after he took it" (f).

4. As an instance of property not assignable on the ground of public policy, may be mentioned salaries or pensions given for the purpose of enabling persons to perform duties connected with the public service, or to enable them to be in a fit state of preparation to perform those duties. In Grenfell v. Dean and Canons of Windsor (g) the Master of the Rolls explained the true reasons for this doctrine. In that case a canon of Windsor had assigned the canonry and the profits to the plaintiffs to secure a sum of money. There was no cure of souls, and the only duties were residence within the castle and attendance in the chapel for twenty-one days a-year. In giving judgment for the plaintiffs and upholding the assignment, the Master of the Rolls said: "If he (the Canon) had made out that the duty to be performed by him was a public duty, or in any way connected with the public service, I should have thought it right to attend very seriously to that argument, because there are various cases in which public duties are concerned in which it may be against public policy that the income arising from the performance of those duties should be assigned; and for this simple reason, because the public is interested not only in the performance from time to time of the duties, but also in the fit state of preparation of the party having to perform them. Such is the reason in the cases of half-pay, where there is a sort of retainer, and where the payments which are made to officers from time to time are the means by which they—being liable to be called into public service—are enabled to keep themselves in a state of preparation for performing their duties.” So, in Davis v. Duke of Marlborough (h), the Lord Chancellor said: “A pension for past services may be aliened, but a pension for supporting the grantee in the performance of future duties is inalienable.”

(f) See also Beckley v. Newland, 2 P. W. 182; and Harwood v. Tooke, 2 Sim. 192.

5. Some classes of property are expressly made inalienable by statute. Thus, in Davis v. Duke of Marlborough, a pension was granted by statute to the duke and his successors in the title “for the more honourable support of the dignities.” It was held, that the object of parliament being, that “it should be kept in mind that it was for a memento and a perpetual memorial of national gratitude for public services,” it was inalienable.

6. Pay, pensions, relief, or allowance payable to any officer of her Majesty’s forces, or to his widow, or to any person on the compassionate list, are made unassignable by statute (i). As also is the pay of seamen in the navy (j), and of half-pay in the marine forces (k); but it would seem that the right to pay actually due at the date of the assignment is assignable (l). Salaries or pensions, not given in respect of public services, are freely assignable (m).

ART. 8.—The Expressed Object of the Trust.

- α. The expressed object of a trust must be such as is consistent with the policy of the law (as distinguished from mere technical rules of pleading or tenure) (a), and must be such as is not opposed to any statutory enactment. Where a trust contravenes these principles, it will not vitiate other trusts or provisions in the settlement unconnected with such illegal object (b), but will itself be wholly void.
- β. The chief cases in which trusts have been held invalid on account of their expressed objects being contrary to the policy of the law, are where those objects have been unreasonable accumulations (c), or perpetuities; the continued personal enjoyment of property in derogation of the rights of creditors under the bankruptcy laws (d); restrictions upon that power of alienation which the law has annexed to the ownership of property (e); the promotion or encouragement of immorality (f), fraud, or dishonesty, and general restraint of marriage (g)

(unless of a second marriage) (h). The objects forbidden by statute are too numerous to mention, but those which chiefly arise with reference to trusts are such as are simoniacal or in derogation of the Mortmain Acts.

ILLUST.—1. At common law a fee simple estate could not (except by executory devise) be made to shift from one person to another, but before the Statute of Uses the same object was gained by means of shifting uses, which were then mere equitable interests; and by means of that statute it was rendered allowable at law.

2. So, again, a chattel cannot at law be limited to one for life, with remainder to another absolutely. But the same object can nevertheless be attained through the medium of a trust (i).

3. At law the freehold must always be in some person in esse, which is often expressed by saying, that a remainder requires a particular estate to support it. This is, however, a rule of tenure, the reasons for which do not now apply, and a trust imposed upon the legal owner to deal with the equitable freehold in a particular way, would be perfectly valid, although it provided for a period of suspended vesting—as, for instance, a trust to accumulate the rents and profits (k).

4. But if the trust directed the trustee to accumulate the income for a period exceeding a life or lives in being, and twenty-one years afterwards, then, since such a trust would be contrary to the policy of the common law, which discountenances such unreasonable accumulations, the whole trust would be void (l).

(h) Marples v. Bainbridge, 1 Mad. 590; Lloyd v. Lloyd, sup.; Craven v. Brady, L. R., 4 Ch. 296; and, as to second marriage of a man, Allen v. Jackson, L. R., 1 Ch. Div. 399.

(i) Lew. 75.

(k) And see also as to trusts which would, if legal estates, be void as contrary to the custom of a manor, Allen v. Bewsey, L. R., 7 Ch. Div. 453.

5. By the Thellusson Act (m) the common law period was further restricted to the life or lives of the grantor or grantors, settlor or settlors; or (not and) twenty-one years from the death of any grantor, settlor, devisor, or testator; or during the minorities of any persons who shall be living, or en ventre sa mere, at the time of the death of the grantor, settlor, devisor, or testator; or during the minorities of any persons who, under the instrument directing the accumulation, would for the time being, if of full age, be entitled to the income directed to be accumulated. The statute, however, does not extend to any provision for payment of debts, or for raising portions for the children of the settlor, grantor, or devisor, or of any person taking any interest under the instrument directing such accumulations, nor to any direction as to the produce of timber upon any lands. It might perhaps be thought that by analogy to the action of the courts, with regard to trusts which transgress the common law period, a trust which endeavoured to go beyond the period allowed by the statute would be wholly void; but this is not so. The statute is merely prohibitory of accumulations going beyond the period prescribed by it, and being in derogation of a common law right, is construed strictly; and therefore, as accumulations which exceed that period, but are within the common law period, are not contrary to public policy as defined by common law, such a trust is good pro tanto (n).

6. A trust, with a proviso that the interest of the cestui que trust shall not be liable to the claims of creditors, is void, so far as the proviso is concerned; and if it can be only ascertained that the cestui que trust was intended to take a vested interest, the mode in which, or the time when, he was to reap the benefit, is immaterial, and the entire interest may either be disposed encouragement to such other to continue his illicit intercourse after the testator's death, and would be therefore void (u).

10. But, in Occleston v. Fullalove (v), a testator by his will gave a share of the proceeds of his residuary estate to his reputed children, Catherine and Edith, "and all other children which I may have, or be reputed to have, by the said M. L., now born, or hereafter to be born." This gift in favour of future-born children was held valid, and Lord Justice James said: "If there be any inducement to wrong, the law can and does deal with it. If there be a covenant for a turpis causa, the covenant is void. If there be an illicit condition, precedent or subsequent, to a gift, it either avoids the gift or becomes itself void. If the gift requires or implies the continuation of wrong-doing, that is in substance a condition of the gift, and falls within the rule of the condition. But how can that apply to an instrument like a will, with reference to gifts taking effect at the death in favour of persons then in existence?" And Lord Justice Mellish said: "In the present case, the will being the will of the putative father himself, it is impossible that it can encourage an immoral intercourse after his death. If the bequest is to be held to be contrary to public policy, it must be because it tended to promote an immoral intercourse in his lifetime. There was no evidence that M. L. knew that the will was made; and if she did know it, she must also have known that it could be revoked at any moment. Then, can it be said that the testator himself would be encouraged in immorality by having the power to make a will in favour of his future children. I cannot see that he would; or, at any rate, I think that this is too uncertain to be made a ground of decision. I am of opinion that a will no more comes into operation for the purpose of promoting immorality, or for effecting something contrary to public policy during a testator's lifetime, than it does for any other purpose."

11. A trust to take effect upon the future separation of a husband and wife is void, as being contrary to public morals (x); but a trust in reference to an immediate separation, already agreed upon, is good and enforceable (y). If, however, the separation does not in fact take place, the trust becomes wholly void (z). The reason of all this is at once obvious, when we consider that a provision for husband or wife, to take effect upon a future separation, is a direct encouragement to misconduct, which may eventuate in a separation; whereas, when a separation is actually agreed on—when both parties have decided that they will no longer remain together—there can be no encouragement to marital misconduct in agreeing to the distribution of their income in a particular manner and for their mutual benefit and advantage.

12. Where property is settled in trust for a woman until she marry a man with an income of not less than 500*l.* a-year (a), or until she marry any person of a particular trade (b), and then over in trust for another, the latter trust is bad, as its object, as gathered from its probable result (c), is to restrain marriage altogether.

13. If, however, the trust over is to take effect only upon the first cestui que trust marrying a particular person, it would be good, as it would not be in general restraint of marriage (d).

14. So where (e) a person by her will gave her residuary estate to trustees, upon trust to pay the income to her nephew and his wife (the testatrix's niece) for their joint lives and the life of the survivor, with a gift over (in the event of the nephew surviving and marrying again) in trust for the children of her said niece, and in default of such children, for the children of the testatrix's sister, it was held that the gift over was good; and Mellish, L. J., in delivering his judgment, said: "It has been said with respect to this rule against restraint of marriage that it has no foundation on any principle; that it has nothing to do with public policy, but that it is a positive rule of law, adopted nobody can tell why; and that, because it is a positive rule of law, adopted nobody can tell for what reason, and without any regard to public policy, therefore it is impossible to make an exception to it, and that the court can do nothing with it but carry it out. I cannot agree with that. It may be, no doubt, that in these modern times we should not for the first time establish such a rule of public policy, but of course if a rule has been established as a rule of law because it was thought agreeable to public policy and to the interests of the nation at the time it was established, it may be that the court cannot alter it because circumstances have altered. . . . If then there was such a rule of public policy, we are to consider how does that rule apply to second marriages? It has never been decided that it applies to second marriages. . . . It appears to me very obvious that, if it is regarded as a matter of policy, there may be very essential distinctions between a first and a second marriage; at any rate there is this, that in the case of a second marriage, whether of a man or a woman, the person who makes the gift may have been influenced by his friendship towards the wife in the one case, and towards the husband in the other case; that is to say, regarding the case of some member of the husband's family, he may make a gift to the husband for life, and then make a gift to the wife because she is the wife of that particular husband, and because he thinks it is more for the benefit of the children that the wife should have the money while the children are young rather than that the children should have it.”

ART. 9.—Necessity or otherwise of Writing and Signature.

α. All declarations of trust of freehold, copyhold (a), or leasehold (b) lands, tenements, or hereditaments, must be manifested and proved by some writing, or by a last will, showing clearly what the intended trust is, or referring to some other document which shows clearly what the trust is; and the declaration of trust (but not necessarily any other writing referred to thereby) must be signed by the party who is by law enabled to declare the trust, or else it is wholly void (c): Provided that the rule does not apply where it would operate so as to effectuate a fraud (d). Where the legal estate is vested in a trustee for an absolute beneficial owner, the latter is the proper party to declare the trust (e).

β. Declarations of trust of personalty, other than chattels real, may be made by word of mouth (f).

ILLUST.—1. In Foster v. Hale, a gentleman named Burdon had a share in a colliery, and the suit was for the purpose of fixing a trust upon his share for the benefit of his partners in a bank, in which he was also concerned. Lord Alvanley, after commenting upon the conduct of the plaintiffs, said: “But it is insisted, that though their names do not appear upon the lease, nor that they publicly, even by inquiry, ever busied themselves about the colliery; yet in fact an agreement took place that he, Burdon, should be a trustee as to his share for them (the plaintiffs) and himself, in equal shares. They say they can make it out satisfactorily to the court and within the Statute of Frauds, and that not by any formal declaration of trust, but by letters under his, Burdon's, hand, and signed by him, in which they allege he admitted himself such trustee, and that, under the true meaning of the statute, it is sufficient if it appears in writing under the hand of a person having a right to declare himself a trustee, and that is a formal declaration of trust. It was contended for the defendants that there is great danger in taking a declaration of trust arising from letters loosely speaking of trusts, which might or might not be actually and definitely settled between the parties with such expressions as 'our,' 'your,' &c., intimating some intention of a trust; that upon such grounds the court may be called upon to execute a trust in a manner very different from that intended, and that it is absolutely necessary that it should be clear from the declaration what the trust is. That I certainly admit. The question, therefore, is, whether sufficient appears to prove that Burdon did admit and acknowledge himself a trustee, and whether the terms and conditions on which he was a trustee sufficiently appear. I do not admit that it is absolutely necessary that he should have been a trustee from the first. It is not required by the statute that a trust should be created by a writing . . . but that it shall be manifested and proved by writing; plainly meaning that there should be evidence in writing, proving that there was such a trust. Therefore, unquestionably, it is not necessarily to be created by writing, but it must be evidenced by writing, and then the statute is complied with. I admit that it must be proved in toto, not only that there was a gift, but what that gift was."

2. In Smith v. Matthews(g) the husband of one Mrs.

(g) 3 De G., F. & J. 139.

Matthews, being a person of dissolute habits, got into difficulties; and thereupon, one Clark, the brother of Mrs. Matthews, entered into an arrangement with Matthews, whereby the latter conveyed to him certain real property, and a certain business, in consideration of his undertaking to pay off all his, Matthew's, debts. Clark entered into possession, and carried on the business for the benefit of his said sister and her children. There was no explicit and formal declaration of trust by Clark, but from several letters it appeared that Clark considered that he held the property "for the benefit of Mrs. Matthews and her family;" and by a memorandum given to the mortgagee, upon paying off the mortgage on the property, it was expressly stated that the title deeds had been handed over to Clark "as the trustee of the real and personal estate of Mrs. Matthews." Clark having died intestate, the lands descended at law to Mrs. Matthews as his heir-at-law, and thereupon her husband tried to get possession of them jure mariti. In order to resist this attempt, it was contended that Clark had constituted himself a trustee for Mrs. Matthews and her children, and that the property therefore devolved, burdened with the trust. Lord Justice Turner, however, held that the trust was not expressed with sufficient certainty in any of the documents, and said, "it must be manifested and proved by writing, signed as required, what the trust is; . . . the main reliance was placed on the memorandum; . . . but I think it by no means improbable that, in speaking of himself as trustee in that memorandum, Clark may have meant no more than that he considered himself a trustee with reference to the duty which he had undertaken for the payment of Matthews' debts; and at all events the memorandum does not show what was the trust to which it refers, and I think, therefore, that no trust in favour of Mrs. Matthews can be founded upon it."

3. In Kilpin v. Kilpin (h) a person transferred stock into the name of an illegitimate daughter and her husband and their two eldest children, and by parol declaration, confirmed by an unsigned entry in a memorandum book, declared that such investments were to be for the benefit of all his daughter's children. Held a good declaration of trust, as the stock was mere personalty.

4. So in McFadden v. Jenkins (i) a creditor desired his debtor to hold the debt in trust for A. The debtor acquiesced, and paid over part of the money to A.; and it was held that the creditor had made a valid declaration of trust, and had constituted the debtor a trustee of the debt for A.

5. But where a father is induced not to make a will by statements of his heir presumptive, that the latter would make suitable provision for his immediate relatives, the court considers that that is a fraud, and, notwithstanding the statute, will oblige the heir to make a provision in conformity with his implied obligation (k). For, as was said by Lord Westbury, in McCormick v. Grogan (l), "the court has from a very early period decided that even an act of parliament shall not be used as an instrument of fraud; and if in the machinery of effectuating a fraud an act of parliament intervenes, a court of equity, it is true, does not set aside the act of parliament, but it fastens upon the individual who gets a title under that act, and imposes upon him a personal obligation, because he applies the act as an instrument for accomplishing a fraud. In this way a court of equity has dealt with the Statute of Frauds, and in this manner also it deals with the Statute of Wills; and if an individual on his deathbed, or at any other time, is persuaded by his heir-at-law or next of kin to abstain from making a will, or if the same individual, having made a will, communicates the disposition to the person on the face of the will benefited by that disposition, but at the

SUB-DIVISION III.

VALIDITY OF DECLARED TRUSTS.

ART. 10.—Who may be a Settlor.

Every person who can hold or dispose of any legal or equitable (a) estate or interest in property may create a trust in respect of such estate or interest.

ILLUST.—1. Practically speaking, an infant cannot now effectually dispose of property so as to bind himself; and, therefore, cannot in general make an irrevocable settlement. However, males over the age of twenty and females over the age of seventeen years can now upon marriage, with the approbation of the High Court (acting in pursuance of the power given to it by the statute 18 & 19 Vict. c. 43, explained by 23 & 24 Vict. c. 83), make binding settlements of real and personal estate belonging to them in possession, reversion, remainder, or expectancy.

2. A married woman cannot in general dispose of her property without the consent and joinder of her husband, and in accordance with the provisions of the Fines and Recoveries Abolition Act. But with regard to property which is her separate property in equity, either under a settlement or the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, she is considered a feme sole, and may therefore either dispose of it or settle it (unless restrained from anticipating it) (b). So, again, she may dispose of property over which she has a general power of appointment, and her husband's concurrence is not necessary (c); and as she can dispose of it, so also, in accordance with the rule, she can create a trust in respect of it (y).

3. A convict while such (i. e. until he has worked out his sentence or been pardoned) is incapable of disposing of his property; and, consequently, cannot create a valid trust in respect of it (z).

ART. 11.—Who may be a Cestui que trust.

Every person who can hold property may lawfully be a cestui que trust of it (a); but a cestui que trust must be a human being or beings (b).

ILLUST.—1. A corporation cannot be cestui que trust of lands without licence under the Mortmain Acts (c), for without such licence it cannot hold lands, and therefore cannot take through the medium of a trust.

2. Similarly, before the act 33 Vict. c. 14, an alien, as he could hold property against everyone except the crown, could also be cestui que trust of land as against everyone except the crown (d); but as he could not take a legal estate by operation of law, so likewise he could not be a cestui que trust by act of law (e). As the above act is not retrospective, it would seem that aliens who acquired lands anterior to the passing of the act are not protected by it, and that the crown is entitled to all lands of which they are cestui que trust (f).

3. A trust for keeping up family tombs is void, because there would be no human cestui que trust (g). A trust, on the other hand, for keeping up a church might be valid as a charity, as it would be in reality a trust for the benefit of the congregation (h).

ART. 12.—Validity as between Settlor and Cestui que trust.

A settlor cannot revoke or vary a voluntary trust (a) (and, à fortiori, a trust based upon valuable consideration), unless there has been some fraud or undue influence exercised to induce him to create the trust (b), or unless he executed the settlement in ignorance of its legal effect (c); and not even then, if he has acquiesced in or acted upon the settlement after the influence has ceased or after he has become aware of the legal effect of the settlement (d). And unless there is at least a meritorious consideration, it will in general, and particularly where the cestui que trust stood in the relation of parent (e), guardian, counsel, solicitor, doctor, priest, or trustee (f) to the settlor, be incumbent upon the cestui que trust to prove that all the provisions are proper and usual, or if there are any unusual provisions that they were brought to the knowledge of and were understood by the settlor (g). No general rule can be laid down as to what are proper and usual provisions, but a power of revocation is not essential (g).

ILLUST.—1. A father transferred a sum of stock into the joint names of his son and of a banker, and told the latter to carry the dividends to the son's account ; the father subsequently made a codicil to his will, attempting to qualify the trust thus declared. The Master of the Rolls, however, said : " If the transfer is not ambiguous, but a clear and unequivocal act, I must take it on the authorities, that for explanation there is plainly no place. If, then, it cannot be admitted to explain, still less can it be allowed to qualify the operation of the previous act, the transfer being held an advancement, nothing contained in the codicil, nor any other matter ex post facto, can ever be allowed to alter what has been already done " (i).

2. In Phillips v. Mullings (k) the facts were these : A young man of improvident habits, being entitled to a sum of money, was induced by the trustee of the money and by a solicitor to execute a settlement, by which he assigned a part of the money to trustees upon trust to invest and to pay him during his life the income thereof as they should think fit, and after his death upon trust for his wife and children (if any), and in default thereof and subject thereto upon trust for certain of his cousins. There was no power of revocation or of appointment, nor a power to nominate new trustees ; the deed was, however, fully explained to him before its execution, and his attention called to the particular clauses. Some years afterwards he attempted to upset this deed, but the court held that it was irrevocable, Lord Hatherley saying : " It is clear that anyone taking any advantage under a voluntary deed and setting it up against the donor must show that he thoroughly understood what he was doing ; it cannot, however, be laid down that such a deed would be voidable unless it contained a power of revocation " (l). This case would seem to greatly modify the decisions in Coutts v. Acworth (m), Wollaston v. Tribe (n), and Everitt v. Everitt (o), the latter of which would seem to have been practically overruled, the circumstances being the same as in Phillips v. Mullings (with the exception that the settlor was a young and inexperienced girl instead of a dissolute young man), and the decision exactly opposite.

3. On the other hand, in the leading case of Huguenin v. Baseley (p), where a widow lady, very much under the influence of a clergyman, made a voluntary settlement in his favour, it was held to be invalid.

4. So, where a father induced a young son, who was still under his roof, and subject to his influence, to make a settlement in favour of his step-brothers and sisters, it was held, that if the son had applied promptly, the court would have set it aside; but that as he had remained quiescent for some years, and had made no objection to the course which he had been persuaded to follow, he was not entitled to relief; on the ground that by so doing, he had in his maturer years practically confirmed that which he had done in his early youth (q). Nor will the court interfere where the settlor subsequently acts under the deed, or does something which shows that he recognizes its validity (r), unless indeed he was ignorant of the effect of the settlement at the date of such recognition (s).

5. Where a person, apparently at the point of death, signed a settlement of which he recollected nothing, which was never read to him, and in which a power of revocation was purposely omitted by the solicitor on the ground that he knew the variable character of the settlor, and there was also evidence that the settlor thought that he was executing the settlement in place of a will, it was held that the settlement was revocable (t).

6. Where a settlor has been induced by fraud to make a settlement, whether voluntary or based upon value, it will not be enforced; as, for instance, where a wife induces her husband to execute a deed of separation, in contemplation of a renewal of illicit intercourse (u). Where, however, it is not in her contemplation at the time, but she does in fact subsequently commit adultery, then, as there was no original fraud, the subsequent adultery will not avoid the settlement (v).

7. Even where there is valuable consideration given, but the settlor is infirm and ignorant, and there is reason to suppose that he did not fully understand the transaction, it will be set aside, unless it be proved that full value was given (w).

8. As an example of the action of the court where the settlor has mistaken the effect of the settlement, the case of Nanney v. Williams (x) may be referred to. There the settlor made an irrevocable voluntary settlement in favour of a relation who also acted as his solicitor. The court considered from the evidence, that the settlor had intended to reserve to himself a power of revocation, and held, that although the deed was otherwise unobjectionable, and would have been valid if the settlor had died intestate and without having revoked it, yet that he having devised the property by his will, had exercised the power of revocation which ought to have been inserted, and that the settlement was consequently avoided.

β. If (although there is no direct proof of such intention) the settlement is voluntary, and the circumstances are such that the settlement must necessarily have the effect of defeating or delaying such creditors, and whether some of the debts existing at the date of the settlement still remain unpaid (d) or not (e). The mere fact that such a settlement has in the event defeated or delayed creditors is not sufficient unless that was its probable result (semble).

Such settlements are, however, valid in the hands of persons who are bonâ fide purchasers for valuable consideration (f), whether from the settlor or from the persons claiming under such settlements.

could not avail himself of the proviso in sec. 5. Stress was laid upon the fact that Pierce was allowed to remain in possession of the goods, although the conveyance purported to be not a mere mortgage, but an absolute alienation. Had it been a mortgage, of course the mere fact of the mortgagor retaining possession would have been no badge of fraud, as it is one of the usual incidents of a mortgage(h). The main and substantial point, however, which the court decided was, that it was obvious, for divers reasons, that the conveyance was a mere fraudulent arrangement between Twynne and Pierce to shelter the latter from the just demands of his creditors, and was therefore void under the statute.

2. So, again, where a director of a company was sued by the company, and fearing that a judgment would be given against him, made a voluntary assignment to his daughter of all his property, it was held that the fraudulent intention was manifest, and that the settlement was void as against the company, although they were not creditors at the time, and it did not appear that there were any creditors at the time(i). Even though the daughter was no party to the fraud, yet she was not protected, because she had not given valuable consideration.

3. And so again, in Spirrett v. Willows(j), the settlor being solvent at the time, but having contracted a considerable debt which would fall due in the course of a few weeks, made a voluntary settlement, by which he withdrew a large portion of his property from the payment of debts, after which he collected the rest of his assets and spent them in the most reckless way, thus depriving the expectant creditor of the means of being paid. In that case there was clear and plain evidence of an actual intention to defeat creditors, and accordingly the settlement was set aside.

4. And again, where one made a voluntary settlement upon himself until bankruptcy, and then over, it was so clearly intended to defraud creditors that it was held void (k).

5. But where value is bonâ fide given by a person for an assignment, even although he may know that the effect of the assignment will be to hinder or defeat the assignor's creditors, or expectant creditors, yet if the transaction be a bonâ fide purchase, and not a mere collusive arrangement between the parties with the intention of causing such hindrance or delay, it will be upheld (l).

6. In Freeman v. Pope (m) the circumstances, so far as they are material as illustrating the principle laid down in paragraph β of this article, were as follows:—The settlor was a clergyman, with a life income of about 1,000*l.* a year; but at the date of the settlement in question his creditors were pressing him, and he had to borrow from his housekeeper a sum wherewith to pay pressing creditors; and he handed over to her as security the only property he had in the world and a policy of insurance for 1,000*l.* upon his own life. The security to the housekeeper exceeded in value her debt by about 200*l.*; but the settlor also owed a debt of 339*l.* to his bankers, which was subsequently increased at the date of the settlement to 489*l.* under an arrangement that he would allow his solicitor to receive part of his income, and out of it pay 100*l.* a year towards liquidating the 489*l.*, and would pay the residue into the banker's bank upon a current account. There was no bargain, however, that the bankers would not sue. Being in these circumstances, he executed a voluntary settlement of the life policy in favour of a Mrs. Pope, and having done so, was consequently in this position, that he had nothing wherewithal to pay, or to give security for the debt of 489*l.*, except the surplus value of the furniture, and he was clearly and completely insolvent the moment he executed the settlement. Upon these facts, a subsequent creditor instituted a suit to set aside the settlement, on the ground that although there was no actual fraud, yet the effect of the settlement was to defraud creditors, and that as there were creditors antecedent to the settlement still unpaid (n), he could ask for it to be set aside; and the court held that this was so, Lord Hatherley saying: "The principle on which the statute of Elizabeth proceeds is this, that persons must be just before they are generous, and that debts must be paid before gifts can be made. The difficulty the Vice-Chancellor seems to have felt in this case was, that if he, as a special jurymen, had been asked whether there was actually any intention on the part of the settlor in this case to defeat, hinder or delay his creditors, he should have come to the conclusion that he had no such intention. It appears to me, that this does not put the question exactly on the right ground, for it would never be left to a special jury to find whether the settlor intended to hinder, delay or defeat his creditors, without a direction from the judge that if the necessary effect of the instrument was to defeat, hinder or delay creditors, that necessary effect was to be considered as evidencing an intention to do so. . . . Of course there may be cases (of which Spirett v. Willows is an example) in which there is direct and positive evidence to defraud; . . . but it is established by the authorities, that, in the absence of any such direct proof of intention, if a person owing debts makes a settlement which subtracts from the property which is the proper fund for the payment of those debts an amount without which the debts cannot be paid; then, since it is the necessary consequence of the settlement (supposing it effectual) that some creditors must remain unpaid, it would be the duty of the judge to direct the jury that they must infer the intent of the settlor to have been to defeat or delay his creditors, and that the case is within the statute." And Lord Justice Giffard said: "There is one class of cases, no doubt, in which an actual and express intent is necessary to be proved, that is in such cases as Holmes v. Penney and Lloyd v. Attwood, where the instruments sought to be set aside were founded on valuable consideration; but where the settlement is voluntary, the intent may be inferred in a variety of ways. For instance, if, after deducting the property which is the subject of the voluntary settlement, sufficient available assets are not left for the payment of the settlor's debts, the law infers intent. Again, if at the date of the settlement the person making the settlement was not in a position actually to pay his creditors, the law would infer that he intended, by making the voluntary settlement, to defeat and delay them. . . . That being so, the appeal must be dismissed."

ART. 14.—Validity as against Trustee in Bankruptcy of a Trader.

α. A voluntary settlement by a trader (unless the trust property has accrued to him since marriage in right of his wife, and the trust is in favour of his wife or his children) is void as against the settlor's trustee in bankruptcy, if he become bankrupt within two years after the date of such settlement; and if the settlor become bankrupt within ten years it is void, unless it can be shown that he was solvent at the date of the settlement without the aid of the property comprised therein (a).

β. Any covenant or contract made by a trader in consideration of marriage, for the future settlement upon or for his wife or children, of any money or property wherein he had not at the date of his marriage any estate or interest, whether vested or contingent (z), in possession or remainder, and not being money or property of or in right of his wife, is, upon his becoming bankrupt before such property or money has been actually transferred or paid pursuant to such contract or covenant, void against his trustee in bankruptcy.

OBS.—It need scarcely be pointed out that these provisions are in addition to, and not in substitution for, those heretofore contained with regard to fraudulent settlements.

ART. 15.—Validity as against subsequent Purchasers.

Every settlement of freeholds, copyholds, or leaseholds (a), made with intent to deceive purchasers, or made without any valuable consideration (b), or containing a power of revocation (c) at the will, or practically at the will (d), of the settlor, is void as against subsequent bonâ fide purchasers for value from, or mortgagees (e) or lessees (f) of, the settlor, and it is immaterial that they have had notice of the settlement (g); but where there is no actual fraud, the settlement will be void so far only (h) as may be necessary to give effect to such subsequent transaction. A voluntary cestui que trust has no equity to the purchase-money as against the settlor (i). This article is, however, subject to the proviso, that every such settlement is valid in the hands of purchasers for value and bonâ fide (k), whether claiming as cestuis que trust under the settlement, or as purchasers from voluntary cestuis que trust, and whether with or without notice of the voluntary character of the settlement (l).

Obs.—In this article, I have attempted to digest the effect of the decisions upon the Act 27 Eliz. c. 4, whereby all conveyances, &c. of land, tenements or hereditaments, made with the intent to defraud purchasers, and also all conveyances with any clause of revocation at the grantor's pleasure, are made void against subsequent purchasers. The principle upon which voluntary settlements have been held void under this act seems to be, that by selling the property afterwards for a valuable consideration, the vendor so entirely repudiates the former voluntary settlement, and shows his intention to sell, as that it shall be taken conclusively against him and the person to whom he conveyed that such intention existed when he made the voluntary conveyance, and consequently that it was made in order to defeat the purchaser (m). This being the principle, the statute can only apply to voluntary conveyances, when the settlor and the subsequent vendor are the same person, and does not apply where the latter is the heir, or a second voluntary grantee of the former (n); unless indeed the settlement was actually fraudulent (o).

It has been repeatedly held that a very small consideration is sufficient to take the case out of this statute (p); and in a recent case it was held, that the mere onus of performing covenants, attaching to the voluntary assignee of a lease, was a sufficient consideration (q).

ILLUST.—1. As an illustration of the principle, that the settlement is void so far only as is necessary to give effect to the subsequent transaction, the case of property subsequently mortgaged may be instanced. In such a case, the voluntary cestuis que trust will be entitled, subject to the mortgage; and if unsettled estates are included in the mortgage, the cestuis que trust are entitled to throw the mortgage on to the unsettled estates, if they are sufficient to answer it (r).

2. The subsequent purchase for value, must be bonâ fide. Thus where the consideration is grossly inadequate, the sale may be impeached by the voluntary cestui que trust, on the ground that the transaction is on the face of it a collusive arrangement between the settlor and the so-called purchaser, for the purpose of relieving the former from the settlement (s).

merely of construction, will be held to take an estate tail (f). Of course, where the doctrine could not apply in law, owing to the life estate being equitable, and the remainder legal, or vice versâ, the rule will not apply in equity (g); nor where the word "heir" is used in the sense of persona designata (h), as where the ultimate limitation is "to the person who may then be the heir of A."

2. But in the leading case of Lord Glenorchy v. Bosville (i), where the settlor devised real estate to trustees upon trust, upon the happening of the marriage of his grand-daughter, to convey the estate to the use of her for life, with remainder to the use of her husband for life, with remainder to the issue of her body, with remainders over, it was held, that though the grand-daughter would have taken an estate tail had it been an executed trust, yet the trust, being executory, was to be executed in a more careful and accurate manner; and that as the testator's intention was to provide for the children of the marriage, that intention would be best carried out by a conveyance to the grand-daughter for life, with remainder to her husband for life, with remainder to her first and other sons in tail, with remainder to her daughters.

3. And so in marriage articles, a covenant to settle estates to the use of the husband for life, with remainder to wife for life, with remainder to their heirs male, and the heirs of such male, is always construed to mean that the settlement shall be so drawn as to give life estates only, to the husband and wife successively (k); for it is not to be presumed that the parties meant to put it in the power of the husband to defeat the very object of the settlement, which is to make a provision for the issue of the marriage (l).

4. So where in marriage articles the word "issue" is used, it will not be confined to male issue, because that would be inconsistent with the object of the articles, but will be construed to mean sons successively in tail, with remainder to daughters in tail, with cross remainders over (m).

5. But where the articles show that the parties understood the distinction, as, for instance, where part of the property is limited in strict settlement, and part not, the trust will be construed strictly (n).

6. In a will it is obvious that the same presumption will not arise as in the case of marriage articles; and, therefore, where a testator gave 300*l.* to trustees, upon trust to lay it out in the purchase of lands, and to settle such lands to the only use of M. and her children, and if M. died without issue, "the land to be divided between her brothers and sisters then living," it was held that this gave M. an estate tail (o).

7. There is, however, no difference between the construction to be put on an executory trust created by marriage articles, and on an executory trust created by will, except so far as the former by its very nature furnishes more emphatically the means of ascertaining the intention of those who created the trust (p). (p) Sackville West v. Holmesdale, L. R., 4 H. L. 543.

Viscount Holmesdale, Lady A., by a codicil to her will, revoked certain uses declared therein, and declared her intentions to be, to give certain real and personal property to trustees, in trust to settle it as near as might be, with the limitations of the barony of Buckhurst, in such manner as the trustees should consider proper, or as their counsel should advise. The barony was limited to Lady De la Warr for life, with remainder to R., her second son, and the heirs male of his body, with remainder to the third, fourth, and other sons in like manner. It was held, that the property ought not to be settled upon R. in tail like the barony, but that it ought to be limited in a course of strict settlement to R. and other younger sons of Lady De la Warr for their respective lives, with remainder to their sons successively in tail male, in the order mentioned in the patent whereby the barony was created; and Lord Chelmsford said: "The best illustration of the object and purpose of an instrument furnishing an intention in the case of executory trusts, is to be found in the instance of marriage articles, where, the object of the settlement being to make a provision for the issue of the marriage, no words, however strong, which in the case of an executed trust would place the issue in the power of the father, will be allowed to prevail against the implied intention. So, as Sir W. Grant said, in Blackburn v. Stables (q), 'in the case of a will, if it can be clearly ascertained from anything in the will that the testator did not mean to use the expressions which he has employed in their strict technical sense, the court, in decreeing such settlement as he has directed, will depart from his words to execute his intention.' . . . There are cases of executory trusts in wills, where the words 'heirs of the body' have been made to bend to indications of intention that the estate should be strictly settled; and a direction in a will, that a settlement 'shall be made as counsel shall advise,' has been held sufficient to show that the words were not intended to have their strict legal effect (r). . . . It appears to me that the words of the codicil express an intention that the barony and the estates should go together to the same person, but not that the limitations of the two should be identical. . . . The word 'correspond' does not mean that the limitations are to be exactly the same, but that they are to be adapted to each other so as to carry out the testatrix's intention that the estate and title should go together. . . . If the settlement were framed with a limitation in the words of the letters patent, Lord Buckhurst would be able to defeat this intention, and, by converting his estate tail into a fee simple, to separate the estate and the title for ever."

8. So again, where a testator bequeathed money to trustees upon trust to purchase real estate, and settle it upon A. for life without impeachment of waste, with remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, with remainder to the heirs of A.'s body, and with a power to jointure, and also devised land to A. upon exactly similar uses, it was held, that the testator manifested an intention to give A. a life estate only, and that consequently in the case of the executory trusts this intention should be carried out; but that in the case of the devise, that being executed, must be construed according to the rule in Shelley's case (s). Where there was a devise to a corporation in trust to convey to A. for life, and afterwards upon the death of A. to his first son for life, and so to the first son of that first son for life, with remainder in default of issue male of A. to B. for life, and to his sons and their sons in like manner, Lord Cowper said, that though the attempt to create a perpetuity was vain, yet, so far as was consistent with the rules of law, the devise ought to be complied with; and he directed, that all the sons already born at the testator's death should take estates for life, with limitations to their unborn sons in tail (t).

(r) Bastard v. Proby, 2 Cox, 6.

9. As a last illustration may be quoted the recent case of Willis v. Kymer (u). There a testatrix had by her will, after requesting her sister Eliza to perform her wishes as therein expressed, bequeathed various legacies to her brothers and sisters and their children, including a legacy of 3,000*l.* to her brother John for life, "the principal to be divided at his death between his children John, Sophia, and Mary Ann." The testatrix subsequently made a codicil, whereby she bequeathed to Eliza, "all I possess," requesting at her death she "will leave the sums as I have directed heretofore." Eliza, by her will, appointed the shares of Sophia and Mary Ann to them to their separate use, and the question then arose whether she could do so; and Sir George Jessel, M. R., said, "I am of opinion that Eliza had power to attach a limitation to separate use.

.. . The original will and codicil say nothing about separate use. They merely direct her to leave the money after her brother's death to his children, and nothing more. She is therefore bound not to make a different disposition. Well, she has conformed to that direction, by leaving the money to the children; and in doing so has taken care to dispose of it in such a manner that the shares of the daughters shall, in case of their marriage, still remain for their own benefit, thus effectually carrying out her sister's intention."

CONSTRUCTIVE TRUSTS.

- ART. 17. Introductory Summary.
 „ 18. Resulting Trusts of undisposed Residue.
 „ 19. Resulting Trusts where declared Trust illegal.
 „ 20. Resulting Trusts where Purchase in another's Name.
 „ 21. Profits made by fiduciary Persons.
 „ 22. Equitable and legal Estates not united in one Person.

ART. 17.—Introductory Summary.

CONSTRUCTIVE trusts arise, either (1) when the legal estate is given but the equitable interest is not, or is only partially disposed of; (2) when the equitable interest is disposed of in a manner which the law will not permit to be carried out; (3) when a purchase has been made in the name of some other person than the real purchaser (in each of which three cases the equitable interest may return, or, as it is technically called, “result” to the settlor or purchaser); (4) when some person holding a fiduciary position has made a profit out of the trust property; and (5) in all other cases where there is no express trust, but the legal and equitable estates in property are nevertheless not co-equal and united in the same individual.

ART. 18.—Resulting Trust where Equitable Interest not wholly disposed of.

When property is given to a person, and it is either expressed on the face of the instrument by which it was given, or, in the absence of such expression, it appears to have been the probable intention of the donor, extracted from the general scope of the instrument (a), that the donee was not intended to take it beneficially, but the instrument is either silent as to the way in which the beneficial interest is to be applied, or directs that it shall be applied for a particular purpose (as distinguished from a mere subjection to such purpose (b)), which purpose turns out to be insufficient to exhaust the property or cannot be carried into effect (c), there will be a resulting trust in favour of the donor or his representatives (d). Where the non-beneficial character of the gift appears on the face of the instrument, no evidence to the contrary is admissible (e); but where it is merely presumed from the general scope of the instrument, parol evidence is (at all events in the case of gifts inter vivos) admissible, both in aid and in contradiction of the presumption (f).

ILLUST.—1. Thus, where real estate was devised to “my trustees,” but no trusts were declared in relation to it, it was held that the trustees must hold it in trust for the testator’s heir; for by the expression “trustees,” unexplained by anything else in the instrument (g), all notion of a beneficial interest in the gift to those individuals was excluded (h).

2. And so where a testator devised and bequeathed all able intention of the grantor was not to confer a benefit (o), and accordingly looks upon the grantee as a trustee for the grantor or his representatives.

6. But where the gift is of chattels, it would seem that an intention to confer beneficially would be presumed, on the ground of the utter fatuity of the proceeding on any other supposition (p). But this presumption is, of course, rebuttable by evidence (q).

7. Where there is a devise to A. upon trust to pay debts or to answer an annuity, there is a resulting trust of what remains, after payment of the debts or satisfaction of the annuity (r).

8. But where (s) one made his will, and thereby gave 5*l.* to his brother (who was also his heir-at-law), and made and constituted his "dearly beloved wife" his "sole heiress and executrix" of all his lands and real and personal estate, to sell and dispose thereof at her pleasure, and to pay his debts and legacies, it was held, that the wife was entitled to the real estate for her own benefit, and that there was no resulting trust to the heir, on the ground that the direction that the wife should be sole heiress, did in every respect place her in the stead of the heir-at-law and not as trustee for him, and that this was "rendered plainer by reason of the language of tenderness and affection which must intend to her something beneficial, and not what would be a trouble only;" in addition to which the heir was not forgotten, but had 5*l.* left him.

9. And so under a devise to A., charged with the payment of debts and legacies (t), or charged with the payment of a contingent legacy (u) which does not take effect, there will be no resulting trust, but the whole property will go to the devisee beneficially, subject only to the charge.

ART. 19.—Resulting Trusts where Trusts declared are Illegal.

When a person has intentionally vested property in another for an illegal purpose, then if the trustee expressly relies (a) upon the maxim "In pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis," the settlor cannot recover it back (b), except in the following cases, namely,—

α. Where the illegal purpose is not carried into execution and nothing is done under it, there is a locus pœnitentiæ, and the mere intention to effect an illegal object will not deprive the settlor of the right to the beneficial ownership, to which the trustee has no honest claim; and there will consequently be a resulting trust in favour of the settlor (c).

β. Where the effect of allowing the trustee to retain the property might be to effectuate an unlawful object, or to defeat a legal prohibition, or to protect a fraud, equity will, on the ground of public policy, enforce a resulting trust in favour of the settlor, so as to prevent the illegal trust being carried into effect (d).

And see also to same effect, Law v. Law, 3 P. W. 393, and St. John v. St. John, 11 V. 535.

ILLUST.—1. Thus in Symes v. Hughes (e), the plaintiff, being in pecuniary difficulties, assigned certain leasehold property to a trustee with the view of defeating his creditors, and two and a half years afterwards was adjudicated bankrupt, but obtained the sanction of his creditors, under sect. 110 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, to an arrangement, by which his estate and effects were re-vested in him, he covenanting to prosecute a suit for the recovery of the assigned property, and to pay a composition of two and sixpence in the pound to his creditors, in case his suit should prove successful. Lord Romilly, M. R., in delivering judgment, said: “The assignment was made for an illegal purpose, and it is said that, such being the case, the court will not interfere. I think the correct answer to this was given by Mr. Southgate, namely, that where the purpose for which the assignment was given is not carried into execution, and nothing is done under it, the mere intention to effect an illegal object when the assignment was executed, does not deprive the assignor of his right to recover the property from the assignee who has given no consideration for it.”

2. So, again, the plaintiff, being apprehensive of an indictment for bigamy (conviction for which involved forfeiture of property), conveyed his real estate to the defendant, on a parol agreement to retransfer when the difficulty should have passed over. It subsequently transpired that the plaintiff was not liable to be indicted, and thereupon he filed a bill praying for a retransfer of his property; and it was held, that although there was no express trust, inasmuch as there was no written proof of it, yet there was a resulting trust to which the statute did not apply, and as there was no illegality in fact, but only in intention, the court ordered the transfer prayed for (f).

3. And where a father conveyed the legal estate in property to his daughter, with the intention of thus escaping from serving as sheriff, but afterwards repented, and paid the fine, Lord Hardwicke said, "I am of opinion that the conveyance ought not to take effect against his intention unless he had actually taken the oath" that he had not the requisite qualification (g).

4. Where a settlor attempts to settle property so as to contravene the policy of the law with regard to perpetuities, such trusts will not only not be carried into effect, but the person nominated to carry them out is held to be a mere trustee for the settlor or his representatives. For the attempt was made either through ignorance or carelessness, or else with a direct intention to contravene the law. In the former case, as there would be no delictum, the usual maxim would not apply. In the latter, equity would not allow the trustee to retain the property and so put it in his power to carry out the illegal intentions of the testator, and to defeat the policy of the law (h).

5. And so again, where land or the proceeds of land is devised to charitable uses, or is devised to one who is under a secret agreement with the testator pledged to apply it to charitable purposes, then, notwithstanding the improper intentions of the testator, yet, as the object of allowing the gift to stand would probably be to effect an object prohibited by law, there will be a resulting trust in favour of the testator's heir-at-law or residuary devisee, as the case may be (i).

6. But where a father granted land to his son, in order to give him a colourable qualification to shoot game under the old game laws, and without any intention of conferring any beneficial interest upon him, the court would not enforce any resulting trust in favour of the father, on the ground probably, that he and the son were in pari delicto, and that there would be no detriment to the public in allowing the son to retain the estate (k). Of course, if there had been no illegality (if, for instance, a bare legal estate had been a sufficient qualification), there would have been a resulting trust (l).

7. So in Ayerst v. Jenkins (m), a widower, two days before going through the ceremony of marriage with his deceased wife's sister (which ceremony was known to both parties to be invalid), executed a deed, by which it was recited that he was desirous of making a settlement and provision for the lady, and had transferred certain shares into the names of trustees, upon the trusts thereafter declared, being for the separate and inalienable use of the lady during her life, and after her death as she should by deed or will appoint. They afterwards lived together as man and wife until the widower's death. Some time afterwards, his personal representative instituted a suit to set aside the settlement, on the ground that it was founded on an immoral consideration; but Lord Selborne said, "Relief is sought by the representative, not merely of a particeps criminis, but of a voluntary and sole donor, on the naked ground of the illegality of his own intention and purpose, and that, not against a bond or covenant or other obligation resting in fieri, but against a completed transfer of specific chattels, by which the legal estate in those chattels was absolutely vested in trustees for the sole benefit of the defendant. I know of no doctrine of public policy which requires or authorizes a court of equity to give assistance to such a plaintiff under such circumstances. When the immediate and direct effect of an estoppel in equity against relief to a particular plaintiff might be to effectuate an unlawful object, or to defeat a legal prohibition, or to protect a fraud, such an estoppel may well be regarded as against public policy. But the voluntary gift of part of his own property by one particeps criminis to another, is in itself neither fraudulent nor prohibited by law; and the present is not the case of a man repenting of an immoral purpose before it is too late, and seeking to recall, while the object is yet unaccomplished (n), a gift intended as a bribe to iniquity. If public policy is opposed, as it is, to vice and immorality, it is no less true, as was said by Lord Truro in Benyon v. Nettlefold (o), that the law in sanctioning the defence of particeps criminis does so on the grounds of public policy,—namely, that those who violate the law must not apply to the law for protection.”

ART. 20.—Resulting Trusts upon Purchases in Another's Name.

When real (a) or personal (b) property is taken in the names of the purchaser and others generally, or in the names of others without that of the purchaser, or in one name, or in several, and whether jointly or successively, there is a primâ facie presumption of a resulting trust in favour of the man or men who, by parol (c) or other evidence, is or are proved to have advanced the purchase-money (d) in the character of purchaser (e). But this presumption may be rebutted—

α. By parol (f) or other evidence;

β. By the fact that the person or persons in whose name or names the purchase was made was or were the wife, child or children of the purchaser (g), or was or were some person or persons towards whom he stood in close relationship, and in loco parentis (h); in any of which cases a prima facie presumption will arise that the purchaser intended the ostensible grantee or grantees to take beneficially. But this last presumption is also capable of being rebutted by evidence, or by surrounding circumstances (i).

ILLUST.—1. If one discharge the purchase-money by way of loan to the person in whose name the property is taken, there will be no resulting trust, because the lender did not advance the purchase-money as purchaser (k).

2. Where the purchase-money is advanced partly by the person in whose name the property is taken, and partly by another, then, if they advance it in equal shares, they will (in the absence of evidence or circumstances showing a contrary intention (l)) take as joint tenants, because the advance being equal the interest is equal; but if in unequal shares, then a trust results to each of them, in proportion to his advance (m).

3. In Crabbe v. Crabbe (n), a father transferred a sum of stock from his own name into the name of his son, and of a broker, and told the latter to carry the dividends to the son's account. The father, by a codicil to his will executed subsequently, bequeathed the stock to another; but it was held that the son took absolutely, the Master of the Rolls saying, "If the transfer is not ambiguous, but a clear and depends on circumstances. The son knew here that his name was used in the mortgage, and must have known whether it was for his own interest or only as a trustee for the father, and instead of making any claim, his acts are very strong evidence of the latter; nor is there any colour why the father should make him any further advancement when he had so many children unprovided for" (l). The dictum of the learned chancellor, that the presumption may be rebutted by subsequent acts, cannot be taken to mean subsequent acts of the father, which are only admissible against, and not for him (m); but must, it is apprehended, refer only to subsequent acts of the son (and only to them when there is nothing to show that the father did actually intend to advance the son (n)), or to subsequent acts of the father so acquiesced in by the son as to raise the presumption that the son always knew that no benefit was intended him. It is also to be remarked, that the fact of the father having previously made provision for the son, would not of itself have been sufficient to rebut the usual presumption, although, taken together with other circumstances, it is a strong link in the chain (o).

6. So the relationship of solicitor and client between the son and the parent has been considered a circumstance that will, of itself, rebut the presumption of advancement (p).

7. In Re De Visme (q) it was laid down, that where a married woman had, out of her separate estate, made a purchase in the name of her children, no presumption of advancement arose, inasmuch as a married woman was under no obligation to maintain her children. But, with great respect, it is submitted that the true ground for presuming that a parent intends to advance his child, is not duty, but natural love and affection. On this point, the judgment of Vice-Chancellor Stuart in Sayre v. Hughes (r) is worthy of study. In that case, a widowed mother, after making her will in favour of her two daughters, transferred East India Stock which had stood in her own name into the names of herself and the unmarried daughter, and died: and the Vice-Chancellor said, "If stock be found standing in the names of two persons, the presumption of law is that it is their property. But if there be evidence that one of them purchased the stock, and that the name of the other was used without any consideration proceeding from that person, the want of consideration induces the court to presume a resulting trust. The more simple case, and that generally referred to in the reported decisions, is the case of a purchase by one person in the name of another. As soon as you have the fact of the purchase in evidence, and show that the purchase-money was paid by a person other than the person to whom the conveyance was made, the fact of want of consideration almost necessarily creates the presumption of a resulting trust. In the case, however, of a father purchasing property in the name of a son, and having the conveyance made to the son—the father paying the purchase-money—the circumstance of a relationship raises a presumption of benefit intended for the son, which rebuts the notion of a resulting trust. In the case of Grey v. Grey (s), before Lord Nottingham, there was, beyond the simple facts of the purchase and the conveyance, the fact of the receipt of the profits by the father. Where the conveyance is to one person and the purchase-money paid by another, the receipt of the profits by the person who paid the purchase-money, in an ordinary case strengthens the presumption that he is the beneficial owner, but in the case of a father and a son this circumstance was not enough to rebut the presumption of benefit to the son. The same doctrine extends to a purchase by a person in loco parentis. Lord Cottenham in Powys v. Mansfield (t), commenting upon the meaning of that expression, said, 'It means a person in such a relation towards the individual in question as raises a presumption of an intention to benefit him.' It has been argued, that a mother is not a person bound to make an advancement to her child, and that a widowed mother is not a person standing in such a relation to her child as to raise a presumption that in a transaction of this kind a benefit was intended for the child. In the case of Re De Visme it was said, that a mother does not stand in such a relationship to a child as to raise a presumption of benefit for the child. The question in that case arose on a petition in lunacy, and it seems to have been taken for granted that no presumption of benefit arises in the case of a mother. But maternal affection as a motive of bounty is perhaps the strongest of all, although the duty is not so strong as in the case of a father, inasmuch as it is the duty of a father to advance his child. That, however, is a moral obligation, and not a legal one." His honor then reviewed the circumstances of the case, in order to see whether they rebutted the presumption of advancement, and, finding that they did not, decided in favour of the daughter.

8. With regard to the presumption of advancement in favour of persons to whom the purchaser stands in loco parentis, it has been held that the presumption arose in the case of an illegitimate child (u), a grandchild when the father was dead (v), and the nephew of a wife who had been practically adopted by the husband as his child (w).

to renew, might have a lease to himself, few trust estates would be renewed to cestuis que trust."

2. And so also a tenant for life of leaseholds (even though they be held under a mere yearly tenancy (b)), who claims under a settlement, cannot renew them for his own sole benefit; for he cannot avail himself of his position, as the person in possession under the settlement, to get a more durable term, and so to defeat the probable intentions of the settlor, that the lease should be renewed for the benefit of all persons claiming under the settlement (c). And upon similar grounds, if a tenant for life accepts money in consideration of his allowing something to be done which is prejudicial to the trust property (as for instance the unopposed passage of an act of parliament sanctioning a railway), he will be a trustee of such money for all the persons interested under the settlement (d).

3. The same principle applies to mortgagees (e), joint tenants (f), partners (g), and owners of land subject to a charge (h).

4. So directors of a company, cannot avail themselves of their position to enter into beneficial contracts with the company (i); nor can they buy property, and then sell it to the company at an advanced price. So promoters of a company hold a fiduciary relation towards the company (k). Directors cannot receive commissions from other parties, on the sale of any of the property of the company (l), and generally they cannot deal for their own advantage with any part of the property or shares of the company (m).

5. Agents come under the same principle (n). Thus, where A., being aware that B. wished to obtain shares in a certain company, represented to B. that he, A., could procure a certain number of shares at 3*l*. a share, and B. agreed to purchase at that price, and the agreement was carried out; but B. afterwards discovered that A. was in fact the owner of the shares, having just previously bought them for 2*l*. a share; it was held that A. was an agent for B., and must be ordered to repay to B. the difference between the price given by B., and that given by A. for the shares (o).

6. So a solicitor who purchases property from a client, must, if the sale be impeached, not only show that he gave full value for it, but also that the client was actually benefited by the transaction. And persons who subsequently purchase from the solicitor with notice of the transaction are under a similar liability (p).

ART. 22.—General Equitable Claims.

In every case (not coming within the scope of any of the preceding articles) where the person in whom real or personal property is vested, has not the whole equitable interest therein, he is pro tanto a trustee for the persons having such other equitable interest (a).

(a) This article, doubtless, includes all those relating to constructive trusts which have preceded it, but as it would be a quite endless task to enumerate every kind of constructive trust, for they are, as has been truly said, conterminous with equity jurisprudence, I have thought it better to call special attention

ILLUST.—1. Thus, where a binding contract is entered into between two persons for the sale of property by one to the other, then, in the words of Lord Cairns, in Shaw v. Foster (b), “There cannot be the slightest doubt of the relation subsisting in the eye of a court of equity between the vendor and the purchaser. The vendor is a trustee of the property for the purchaser; the purchaser is the real beneficial owner in the eye of a court of equity of the property, subject only to this observation, that the vendor (whom I have called a trustee) is not a mere dormant trustee; he is a trustee having a personal and substantial interest in the property, a right to protect that interest, and an active right to assert that interest if anything should be done in derogation of it. The relation therefore of trustee and cestui que trust subsists, but subsists subject to the paramount right of the vendor and trustee to protect his own interest as vendor of the property.” He is, however, only trustee pro tanto, and his duties are strictly matter of contract (c).

2. In the converse case, where the vendor has actually conveyed the property, but the purchaser has not paid the purchase-money, or has only paid part of it, the vendor has a lien upon the property for the unpaid portion (d); and the purchaser will hold the estate as a trustee pro tanto, unless by his acts or declarations the vendor has plainly manifested his intention to rely, not upon the estate, but upon some other security, or upon the personal credit of the individual (e). A mere collateral security will not, however, suffice (f); but where it appears that a bond, covenant, mortgage or annuity was itself the actual con-tioned, and, it is respectfully apprehended, rightly so (m). In another case, it was said that a mortgagee in possession who, after the mortgagor's death, bought up the widow's right to dower, was obliged to hold it in trust for the heir, upon his paying the purchase-money (n); and although this case has called forth much comment (o), it is difficult to distinguish it in principle from the class of cases treated of in the last article.

6. Upon similar principles, a court of equity converts a party who has obtained property by fraud "into a trustee for the party who is injured by that fraud; but that, being a jurisdiction founded on personal fraud, it is incumbent on the court to see that a fraud, or malus animus, is proved by the clearest and most indisputable evidence; it is impossible to supply presumption in the place of proof" (p).

EVERY person who can hold property, may have property vested in him as trustee; but where the trust is a special trust, he can only execute it, where he is, in the eye of the law, competent to exercise discretion (a).

ILLUST.—1. An infant may be appointed a trustee, for he is capable of holding property, but he cannot properly carry out a special trust during his minority. In King v. Bellord (b), V.-C. Page Wood said: “The contest arises thus: a testator having chosen to devise estates upon trusts requiring discretion as to the expediency, as to the time, and as to the manner of a sale, to three persons, one of whom is an infant, the question is, whether a contract for sale entered into by those three trustees is a valid contract which the court can specifically perform. There can be no doubt that if a man by his will gives an infant a simple power of sale without an interest, the infant may exercise it. . . . It is to be observed that all the cases relied on with reference to powers, have gone upon the principle, have made a good title, and could have executed the trust (h), but there would seem to be no means of forcing the crown to execute a trust (i); although, it is apprehended, that practically, by means of a petition of right, the crown would be as amenable to the court in this matter as an individual.

3. A married woman may undoubtedly be a trustee (k), but she is not a desirable person for the office. No doubt she can exercise powers collateral, or in gross, or appendant (l); but she can only execute a trust to sell, unaccompanied by a power of appointment, with her husband's consent and joinder; for not only is he the party liable (m), but as she takes a mere legal estate, she takes it subject to her legal disabilities and incidents (n); and it is apprehended, that even where there is a power vested in her to sell, she would not be capable of entering into a binding contract to execute the power, as it is no question affecting her separate estate (o).

ART. 24.—Disclaimer of a Trust.

No one is bound to accept the office of trustee (a).

Both the office and the estate may be disclaimed before acceptance, either by deed (b) or (save in the case of a married woman, who must disclaim by deed (c)) by doing an act which is tantamount to a disclaimer (d). The disclaimer should be made within a reasonable period, having regard to the circumstances of the particular case (e).

ILLUST.—1. Thus, even though a person may have agreed in the lifetime of a testator to be his executor, he is still at liberty to recede from his promise at any time before proving the will (f).

2. A prudent man will of course always disclaim by deed, in order that there may be no question of the fact; but a disclaimer by counsel at the bar is sufficient (g); and in Stacey v. Elph (h), where a person, named as executor and trustee under a will, did not formally renounce probate until after the death of the acting executor, nor formally disclaim the trusts of the will, but purchased a part of the real estate, and took a conveyance from the tenant for life and the heir-at-law to whom the estate must have descended on disclaimer of the trust, it was held that he had by his conduct disclaimed the office and estate of trustee under the will; and Sir J. Leach, M.R., said: “In this case there is no ambiguity in the conduct of the defendant; he never interfered with the property, except as the friend or agent of the widow; and it is plain from the confidence which the testator appears to have placed in him by his will that he was a particular friend of the family. . . . It is true he never executed a deed disclaiming the trust, but his conduct disclaimed the trust; in the purchase of the small real estate made by him, he took by feoffment from the widow and eldest son of the testator, in whom the estates could only vest by the disclaimer of the trustee.” In Re Ellison's Trusts (h), however, Sir W. Page Wood, V.-C., expressed some doubt whether a freehold estate could be disclaimed by parol, or otherwise than by deed; but his honour's attention does not appear to have been called to Stacey v. Elph, and as the case was only an unopposed petition for the appointment of new trustees, it can hardly be taken as an authority against the rules above laid down.

ART. 25.—Acceptance of the Trust.

A person may accept the office of trustee expressly, or he may do so constructively, by doing such acts as are only referable to the character of trustee or executor (a), or by long acquiescence.

ILLUST.—1. A trustee expressly accepts the office, by executing the settlement (b), or by making an express declaration of his assent (c).

2. Permitting an action concerning the trust property to be brought in his name (d), or otherwise allowing the trust property to be dealt with in his name (e), is such an acquiescence as will be construed to be an acceptance of the office.

3. So, where the office of executor is clothed with certain trusts, or where the executor is also nominated the trustee of real estate under a will, he is construed to have accepted the office of trustee if he takes out probate to the will (f); and acceptance of the trusts of a will is constructive acceptance of the office of trustee of estates, devised thereby, of which the testator was trustee (g).

SUB-DIVISION II.

THE ESTATE OF THE TRUSTEE AND ITS INCIDENTS.

ART. 26.—Cases in which the Trustee takes any Estate.

- α.* Where the trust is a simple trust, and the trust property is of freehold tenure, then, in consequence of the Statute of Uses, the trustee takes no estate unless the property be limited to his use, or unless there be a clear intention to vest an estate in him. But where the trust is a special trust the statute does not apply, and the trustee will take an estate.
- β.* Where the trust property is of copyhold or leasehold tenure, or is pure personalty, the Statute of Uses is inapplicable, and the trustee takes the legal estate, whether the trust be simple or special.

ILLUST.—1. Thus, where a freehold estate is limited to trustees, and the words used are “in trust to pay to” a specified person the rents and profits, there the trustees take the legal estate, because they must receive before they can make the required payments. But where the words are “in trust to permit and suffer A. B. to take the rents and profits,” there the use is divested out of them and executed in the party, the purposes not requiring that the legal estate should remain in them (a).

2. Where, however, the trustees are to permit and suffer the cestui que trust to receive the net or clear rents and profits, the trustees take the legal estate, it being presumed that the trustees are to take the gross rents, and after payment of outgoings, to hand over the net rents to the cestui que trust (b).

(a) Per. Parke, J., Barker v. Greenwood, 4 M. & W. 429; Doe d. Leicester v. Biggs, 2 Taunt. 109; Doe v. Bolton, 11 A. & E. 188.

(b) Barker v. Greenwood, sup.; White v. Parker, 1 Bing. N. C. 573; Shapland v. Smith, 1 Bro. C. C. 75.

3. So, again, where the trustees are to exercise any control or discretion they take an estate; as, for instance, where the cestui que trust is empowered to give receipts for the rents with the approbation of the trustees (c), or the trust is for the separate use of a married woman, who consequently requires protection, the trustees take the legal estate (d); at all events, where the trust is created by will. But where it is created by deed, it would seem that the common law courts, not recognizing the separate estate of a feme covert, would (at all events before the Judicature Act, 1873) have held that such a trust was a simple trust, and therefore came within the Statute of Uses (e).

4. Where property is devised to trustees charged with payment of debts, and subject thereto in trust for A., there, as the trustees are not directed to pay the debts, they have no duties, and consequently, take no estate (f).

5. Where the language is ambiguous, and may be read either as implying a simple or a special trust, the question must be determined according to the general rules of construction. Thus, the words "to pay or permit him to receive" would, if contained in a deed, create a special trust, inasmuch as of two inconsistent expressions in a deed the first prevails; whereas the same words occurring in a will would create a simple trust, as the testator's last words are preferred (g).

6. In Houston v. Hughes (h), it was held that, notwithstanding the Statute of Uses, under a devise of freeholds and copyholds to A. and his heirs, in trust for B. and his heirs, the circumstance that A. took an estate in the copyholds was an argument in favour of an intention that he should take the legal estate in the freeholds. It is, however, apprehended that a similar limitation in a deed would be construed far more strictly.

ART. 27.—The Quantity of Estate taken by the Trustees.

Whenever a trust is created a legal estate sufficient for the execution of the trust is, if possible, implied; but the legal estate limited to the trustee is not carried further than the complete execution of the trust necessarily requires (a). In applying this rule, the following principles are of importance:—

α. Deeds are construed strictly, and take effect according to their strict legal meaning, unless the very object and intention of the instrument would be defeated by such a construction (b).

β. Wills are construed loosely, and although no estate or an insufficient estate be expressly given to trustees, the legal estate is impliedly vested in them as long as the execution of the trust requires it, and (unless there are recurring trusts (c)), no longer (d).

γ. A devise to trustees and their heirs, primâ facie passes the fee simple (e) (and if the trusts by their nature extend over an indefinite period that presumption is irrebutable (f)); but if a less estate would certainly enable the trustees to fulfil all the trusts, and it can be pointed out on the face of the settlement what other estate the trustees can take, but not otherwise, the primâ facie absolute nature of the gift is destroyed, and the trustees take such during the life of C. to support contingent remainders, remainder to the first and other sons of C. in tail male, remainder to divers other uses, remainder to the said B. and his heirs (without saying during the life of the tenant for life) to support and preserve contingent remainders, with divers remainders over. The question arose whether, under the last limitation to B. and his heirs, he took the fee simple, or whether he only took that which was necessary for the purpose of the trust, namely, an estate pur autre vie; but the court held that it was not a sufficient ground for restricting an estate limited in a deed to a trustee and his heirs to an estate for life, that the estate given to the trustee seemed to be longer than was essential to its purpose; and the Lord Chief Baron, quoting from the judgment of Lord Chief Justice Willes in Parkhurst v. Smith, said: "Though the intent of the parties be never so clear, it cannot take place contrary to the rules of law, nor can we put words in a deed which are not there, nor put a construction on the words of a deed directly contrary to the plain sense of them; but where the intent is plain and manifest, and the words doubtful and obscure, it is the duty of the judges to endeavour to find out such a meaning in the words as will best answer the intent of the parties." And the Lord Chief Baron also said: "As to the notion that whenever an estate is limited to a person professedly as a trustee, he shall, whatever terms may be used, take only the estate requisite to enable him to perform his trust, and this though of a freehold, and in a deed, I do not find it supported by any authority, nor even by any dictum."

2. On the other hand, where by will the rents of certain lands are directed to be paid to a married woman by the testator's executors, there is an implied devise to the executors of such an estate in the land as will enable them to execute the trust (k).

3. So if land be devised to trustees without any words of limitation, and they are expressly directed to sell (l), or impliedly authorized to do so (m), certainly or contingently (n), or are authorized to lease indefinitely or to mortgage (o), or to do any other act which requires the complete control over the property (p), the trustees will take (and even before the Wills Act would have taken) an estate in fee simple, or other the whole estate which the testator could dispose of.

4. But where there are recurring trusts which require the legal estate to be in the trustees, with intervening limitations, which taken alone would vest the legal estate in the persons beneficially entitled, and there is no repetition before each of the recurring trusts of the gift of the legal estate to the trustees, the legal estate is held to be in the trustees throughout, and the intermediate estates are equitable and not legal (q). To show the importance of this principle, it is well to refer to the leading case of Harton v. Harton (r), where the limitations were to trustees in trust for A. for life for her separate use, remainder to the heirs of her body, remainder to B. for life for her separate use, with remainder to the heirs of her body. Here the separate use gave the trustees an estate during A.'s life and also during B.'s life; but had it not been for this last trust, they would not have taken the legal estate during the intermediate trust in favour of the heirs of A.'s body. As, however, there was a recurring trust they did so; and, therefore, as the estate of A., and the estate given to the heirs of her body, were both equitable estates, the rule in Shelley's case applied and A. took an estate tail.

5. In Collier v. Walters (s) a testator by will, dated in 1827, had devised his estate to trustees and their heirs upon trust that they and their heirs should stand seised of the same during the life of W. C., and also until the whole of the testator's debts and the legacies thereafter mentioned were paid, upon trust to let the same and apply the rents in discharge of his debts, after payment of which, they were to apply the rents in payment of legacies, and finally hold the property upon trust to pay the rents to W. C. and his assigns during his life; and after the decease of W. C. and payment of the debts and legacies and all expenses, the testator devised the property to the heirs of the body of W. C., with remainders over. In 1830, the debts and legacies being paid, the trustees conveyed the estate to W. C. for life, who shortly afterwards, relying on the rule in Shelley's case, suffered a common recovery and barred the entail. Upon his right to do this coming in question Sir Geo. Jessel, M. R., said: "The first observation to make upon this will is this, that there is a gift to trustees and their heirs, and that the trustees and their heirs are to stand seised (they get legal seisin of something, and it was not denied that they must get an estate of freehold of some kind or other) 'for and during the term of the natural life of my brother William, and also until the whole of my just debts and all interest due thereon have been paid.' Now the rule is this, that trustees under a devise to them and their heirs prima facie take a fee. . . . Now this kind of case was again considered in Poad v. Watson (t), and there Mr. Justice Coleridge puts the rule in this way, 'The paramount rule is to look to the intention as appearing on the whole will. But there are secondary rules, one of which is that the words of devise to trustees and their heirs are to have their natural effect, to give a fee simple, unless something shows that it is cut down to an estate terminating at some time ascertained at can be fairly and properly implied from the words used in this will." His lordship therefore held, that the trustees took the legal fee, and that W. C. consequently, under the rule in Shelley's case, took an equitable estate tail.

OBS.—The rule restricting the estate taken by trustees to the quantity necessary for the performance of the trust gave rise to the doctrine of indefinite terms, and determinable fees. Thus, where property was devised to trustees upon trust out of the rents and profits to pay debts, &c., it was held that they took an indefinite term necessary to enable them to pay the debts (u). And where the devise was to trustees and their heirs, in trust to raise and pay money, it was held that they took the fee, only until the money was raised (v). The 30th and 31st sections of the Wills Act put an end to both these doctrines with regard to wills executed since that act; but, apart from its provisions, it is considered improbable that either doctrine would now be adopted (w), and indeed the doctrine of determinable fees has been expressly overruled (x).

ART. 28.—Devolution of the Legal Estate.

- α. Where there are two or more trustees, they take as joint tenants; and upon the death of one of them, the estate survives to his co-trustees or trustee.
- β. Upon the death of a sole or last surviving executive trustee intestate, the trust property descends to his real or personal representatives, according to its nature.
- γ. Upon the death of a sole or last surviving bare trustee intestate, since the passing of the Vendors and Purchasers Act, 1874, the trust property de-

ILLUST.—1. On the decease of a sole or last surviving trustee of leaseholds, intestate as to trust estates, the legal estate devolves on his executor; and if the executor dies similarly intestate as to trust estates, the legal estate vests in his executor; for an executor of an executor represents the original testator; but if the executor of the trustee had died wholly intestate, or without naming an executor, then an administrator de bonis non of the trustee would have to be appointed to convey the legal estate, as an administrator of an executor does not represent the original testator.

ART. 29.—Devise of the Trustee's Estate.

A trustee can devise or bequeath the legal estate in the trust property (a), and it will pass under a general devise or bequest of his property, unless the will contain expressions authorizing a narrower construction, or the disposition of the estate so devised or bequeathed is such as a testator would be unlikely to make of property not his own (b).

ILLUST.—1. Thus, where a testator subjects the property, passing under a general devise, to the payment of debts or legacies (c), or directs them to be sold (d), or devises them to persons as tenants in common (e), or to a numerous and unascertained class (f), or limits them in strict settle-

The property of a bankrupt divisible among his creditors, does not comprise property which can be identified (a) as property held by him as trustee for any other person (b), even though he may have converted it into property of a different character (c), and although it is property in his order and disposition at the commencement of the bankruptcy (d).

ILLUST.—1. If goods consigned to a factor be sold by him and reduced into money, yet if the money can be identified—as, for instance, where it has been kept separate and apart from the factor's own monies, or kept in bags, or the like (e), or has been changed into bills or notes (f), or any other form (g),—the employer, and not the creditors of the factor, will, upon his bankruptcy, be entitled to the property into which it has been converted; for the creditors of a defaulting trustee can have no better right to the trust property than the trustee himself (h), and it makes no difference in this respect that the trustee committed a breach of trust in converting the property, for an abuse of Formerly it was also liable to forfeiture and escheat, but there can no longer be forfeiture or escheat of a trust estate (f).

3. So, again, trustees of copyholds who take an estate must be admitted by the lord of the manor on the customary terms (g).

4. Where a debtor to the trust estate becomes bankrupt, the trustee is the proper person to prove without the concurrence of the cestui que trust (h), unless in the case of a simple trust. Where it is as likely as not that the debtor has paid the cestui que trust direct, then it lies in the discretion of the judge to require the concurrence of the cestui que trust (i).

Where a trust does not exhaust the whole of the trust property, and there is no one in whose favour the trust can result, then, if the trust property be real estate, the trustee takes absolutely (a), and if personal estate, it goes to the crown as bona vacantia (b).

ILLUST.—1. In the leading case of Burgess v. Wheate (c), the settlor conveyed real estate unto and to the use of trustees, in trust for herself, her heirs and assigns, to the intent that she should appoint, and for no other use whatever. She subsequently died without having appointed, and without heirs; and it was held that (there being holders of the legal estate—namely, the trustees) the crown could not claim by escheat, and that the trustees (no person remaining who could sue them in equity) retained, as the legal proprietors, the beneficial interest also.

2. But if the settlor in the last case had appointed or devised her equitable interest to C., in trust for purposes which could not take effect, then, as between the original trustees and C., the latter would be entitled to the property as the nominee under the will. The court will, as between those parties, only carry out the testator's directions, and will not inquire how far the directions can be executed in their integrity (d).

3. The rule also applies to a constructive trustee. Thus a mortgagee in fee, whose mortgagor dies intestate and without heirs, takes the property absolutely, subject to the mortgagor's debts (e). Whether this would be the case if the mortgagee was a mere equitable mortgagee, seems to be more doubtful; but it is submitted that, on the principle of Onslow v. Wallis, the result would be the same as if he were the legal mortgagee.

SUB-DIVISION III.

THE DUTIES OF A TRUSTEE.

ART. 33.—A Trustee must exercise reasonable care.

EXCEPT where courts of equity have imposed distinct and stringent duties upon trustees (which duties are mentioned in the succeeding articles of this sub-division), they are only bound to exercise a reasonable discretion, and to use such due diligence and care as men of ordinary prudence and vigilance would use in the management of their own affairs (a). But, nevertheless, the mere fact that a trustee who has done an act which is, in fact, a breach of trust, did so under the advice of a professional man, will not excuse him (b). Yet it is apprehended that it would be strong evidence of diligence where the alleged breach is alleged to have arisen from mere negligence, and not from the breach of some distinct duty.

ILLUST.—1. Thus, it is their duty to realize debts owing to the trust estate with all convenient speed (c), but they are not bound to commence legal proceedings when, in the exercise of a reasonable discretion, they consider it inexpedient to do so. For instance, in a case where one cestui que trust would have been ruined by the immediate realization of a debt due from him to the trust estate, and the other cestuis que trust (his children) would have been seriously prejudiced, the House of Lords held, that the trustee in that character, and is not affected by the bankruptcy or the certificate " (h).

5. So, again, where a settlor has, for valuable consideration, covenanted to settle property, a trustee who neglects to enforce the covenant is liable for any loss occasioned thereby (i):

6. Or, again, if a trustee neglect to register the trust instrument (where it requires to be registered), and the settlor is thereby enabled to effect a mortgage on the property, the trustee will be liable (k).

7. In the exercise of due diligence, trustees for sale will, of course, use their best endeavours to sell to the best advantage. They should, therefore (in general), abstain from joining with the owners of contiguous property in a sale of the whole together, unless, indeed, such a course would be clearly beneficial to their cestuis que trust, for by doing so they expose the trust property to deterioration on account of the flaws or possible flaws in the title to the other property; but "suppose there were a house belonging to trustees, and a garden and forecourt belonging to somebody else, it must be obvious that those two properties would fetch more if sold together than if sold separately; you might have a divided portion of a house belonging to trustees, and another divided portion belonging to somebody else. It would be equally obvious if these two portions were sold together, that a more beneficial result would thereby take place. . . . But in those cases where it is not manifest on a mere inspection of the properties that it is more beneficial to sell them together, then you ought to have reasonable evidence that it is a prudent and right thing to do, and that evidence, as we know by experience, is obtained from surveyors and other persons who are competent judges " (l).

8. "Where trustees for sale are joint owners with a third party, or are reversioners, it is obvious that they may in general join in a sale; for everybody knows that as a general rule (of course there are exceptions to every rule) the entirety of a freehold estate fetches more than the sum total of the undivided parts, or the separate values of the particular estate and the reversion" (m).

9. Again, trustees for sale ought not to do any act which will depreciate the property, and so they ought not unnecessarily to limit the title (n), for no reasonable man would unnecessarily depreciate his own property by such means.

10. Again, if trustees for sale, or those who act under their authority, fail in reasonable diligence in inviting competition, or if they contract to sell under circumstances of great improvidence or waste, they will be personally responsible (o). It is therefore the duty of trustees for sale to inform themselves of the real value of the property, and for that purpose to employ, if necessary, some experienced person to value the same (p).

11. The same principle holds good in the case of trustees for purchase, or for investing trust moneys on mortgage, who ought to clearly satisfy themselves of the value of the property, and for that purpose to employ a valuer of their own, and not trust to the valuer of the vendor or mortgagor; for a man may bonâ fide form his opinion, but he looks at the case in a totally different way when he knows on whose behalf he is acting; and if the trustees rely upon the vendor's valuer, and he, however bonâ fide, values the property at more than its true value, they will be liable (q).

12. Trustees for purchase, or for investment on mortgage, should also take reasonable care that they get a good marketable title, and that they do not, by conditions of sale, bind themselves not to require one (r); and, except in very exceptional cases, they should never purchase without getting the legal estate; for although a man may be himself willing to take the risk of leaving an outstanding legal estate, he is not justified in incurring that risk for other people (s).

13. Upon similar grounds, a trustee who is empowered to invest trust funds at his discretion, is not entitled to lend them on mere personal security; for that would not be a reasonable exercise of his discretion (t); and it would seem that it would not be proper for him to invest in foreign securities (u), or foreign railways (w), or in trade (x); but the reason of this is, that (as will be seen hereafter) there is a special duty of care cast upon trustees for investment. Where a trustee is directed to invest on security at his discretion, he cannot properly invest in shares, for they are not a security at all, but only a right to participate in profits (y).

14. Trustees for investment on mortgage, cannot, without risk, advance more than two-thirds of the actual value of freehold estate (z); and if it be house property, not more than one-half (a); and if it be trade property, the value of which depends upon the continued prosperity of the trade, it would be hazardous to advance even so much as that (b).

existing at the time of the testator's decease. What then existed the executors did possess, that is, the leasehold premises. Being in their possession, a fire, for which they were not to blame, occurred. It was a mere misfortune which took place. Can the loss be said to have happened by their default in not keeping up a contingent claim? Was this property which, but for their default, they might have got? It is very difficult to say that it was."

18. Trustees being liable for gross negligence, they are, à fortiori, liable where they combine reckless disregard of the interests of their cestuis que trust with mala fides. Thus, where one trustee retires from the trust for the purpose of enabling his co-trustee to commit a breach of trust, or in order, as he thinks, to relieve himself from the responsibility of the wrongful act meditated by his co-trustee, he will be held as fully responsible as if he had been particeps criminis (i).

19. Even a quasi trustee, such as a vendor before completion of the sale, is obliged to take due care of the property, and to see that it does not become unnecessarily depreciated by want of care (k).

ART. 34.—Trustee must see that he hands the Trust Property to the right Person.

The whole responsibility of handing the trust property to the persons entitled falls upon the trustee; and if he hands it to the wrong person, either through mistake on his part or in consequence of some fraud practised upon him, he will have to make the loss good, however careful he may have been. In cases of doubt, therefore, the trustee should apply to the court for its direction (a).

ILLUST.—1. Thus where a trustee makes a payment to one who produces a forged authority from the cestui que trust, the trustee, and not the cestui que trust, will have to bear the loss; for, as was said by Lord Northington (b), “a trustee, whether he be a private person or a body corporate, must see to the reality of the authority empowering him to dispose of the trust money; for if the transfer is made without the authority of the owner, the act is a nullity, and in consideration of law and equity the right remains as before.”

2. So, again, trustees who paid over the trust fund to wrong persons upon the faith of a marriage certificate which turned out to be a forgery, were made responsible for so much of the trust fund as could not be recovered from those who had wrongfully received it (c).

3. A trustee who, by mistake, pays the capital to the tenant for life instead of investing it and paying him the income only, will have to make good the loss to the estate, although he will, as will be seen hereafter (d), be entitled to be recouped out of the life estate (e).

OBS.—It is difficult to see how the law, as above stated, could have come into being, except upon the false analogy of a trustee, to a banker or creditor. As has been shown in the last article, a trustee is in the position of a gratuitous bailee; he must take reasonable care of the trust property, and if it is lost or stolen he is discharged from responsibility, provided that he was guiltless of negligence. If, then, a careful trustee is not responsible for property stolen from his custody, upon what conceivable ground should he be held responsible for property obtained from him by false pretences or forgery, which are crimes far more subtle, and against which it is much more difficult to safeguard oneself. It is humbly suggested, therefore, that in these instances the law might be reconsidered with advantage.

ART. 35.—Trustees must not in general depute their Duties.

A trustee may not depute his duties or authority (a), either to a stranger (b) or to his co-trustees or co-trustee (c), save only—

α. Where he is obliged to do so from necessity (d);

β. Where by doing so he is acting conformably to the common usage of mankind, and as prudently as if acting for himself, and according to the usage of business (e); or

γ. Where the settlement has authorized his doing so (f).

But even where he may safely permit another to receive trust property, he will not be justified in allowing it to remain in such other person's custody for a longer period than the circumstances of the case require (g).

ILLUST.—1. Thus a trustee for sale, who leaves the whole conduct of the sale to his co-trustee, cannot shield himself from responsibility for the latter's negligence by saying that he left the matter entirely in his hands (h). But, on the other hand, there is no objection to his employing an agent where such a course is conformable to the common usage of mankind, and the trustee acts as pru-mortgagor's title. Owing to the solicitor's negligence, in failing to make proper inquiries as to previous incumbrances, the trust moneys advanced on the mortgage were to a large extent lost, and his lordship held that the trustees must replace them. But it is difficult to understand upon what grounds the learned judge based his opinion. The trustees were right in investing on mortgage; they were right in employing a skilled person to investigate the real value of the security; indeed, it is apprehended, from the remarks of Sir George Jessel, M. R., in Re Cooper (p), which have been quoted in the 7th illustration to Article 33, that it was the duty of the trustees to employ a skilled person. In addition to which, there was a moral necessity for them to employ a skilled agent to investigate the title, and they were but acting conformably to the general "usage of mankind, and as prudently for the trust as for themselves, and according to the usage of business" (q). If, then, they were right in employing the solicitor to investigate the title for them, upon what possible ground could they be holden responsible for their agent's default. As Lord Hardwicke said, in Ex parte Belchier (r), if the defendant "is chargeable in this case, no man in his senses would act. . . . This court has laid down a rule with regard to the transactions of assignees, and more so of trustees, so as not to strike a terror into mankind acting for the benefit of others, and not for their own;" and his lordship then proceeded to lay down the rule as above stated. It is with great respect submitted, that Lord Romilly confused the case with those in which it has been held that a trustee is responsible for a breach of trust which he has committed bonâ fide and under skilled advice. The distinction is, however, clear. The trustees had not done anything wrong. They had not committed any breach of trust at the instance of another. They had merely lent money through the medium of an agency, which they were entitled, and indeed bound, to employ, on the ground of moral necessity, and they ought therefore to have been discharged from the loss. Had there been a distinct breach of some duty which the settlor had cast upon the trustees, then, although they might have taken and followed the best advice procurable, they would no doubt have been properly held responsible; but here, the only possible breach of duty was the negligence of an agent, and, as has been said above, a trustee is only responsible for his agent where he has improperly employed one.

(p) Supra.

4. In Re Bird (s), on the other hand, Vice-Chancellor Bacon seems (if I may say so, with great submission,) to have gone to the opposite extreme. There, one of three executors employed the solicitor of the testatrix for the purpose of obtaining a settlement with a creditor of the testatrix. The solicitor subsequently informed the executor that the compromise had been effected, and requested a cheque for the amount, which the executor sent. No compromise had ever been made, and the solicitor appropriated the money to his own use. Here it might have been anticipated that the executor would have been held liable, as, in accordance with Bostock v. Floyer (t), he ought to have paid the money to the creditor personally and not to the solicitor; but the Vice-Chancellor decided that he was not liable, saying, “It seems to me that the executor has done just what any prudent man would think himself safe in doing. He finds that the testatrix had in her lifetime employed Mr. Hunt as her solicitor. He had been employed as her solicitor on various matters; his credit was not called in question, his ability was not doubted. He had arranged for her some other claims, and when, after her death, a claim is made by these two companies, naturally enough Mr. Hunt is employed to conduct the business, namely, the compromise of these claims. Having employed this attorney to negotiate for a compromise, and being told by him ‘I have got these terms for you, and 310*l.* is payable,' the executor puts into his hands the 310*l.* What negligence is there in that? What incautious trusting to some other person's representation? It is all in the ordinary course of the business then being transacted, and I cannot think that the executor has neglected any caution which it was incumbent on him to exercise." Whether or not the present state of the law will permit of a trustee entrusting a solicitor with money, it is suggested that his honor's decision is in accordance with that summa ratio which the simple-minded believe to be equivalent to the summum jus.

5. A trustee will be liable where he has unnecessarily left trust moneys in the hands of a banker or broker who fails, when he ought to have invested them, or where he has paid money to a banker or broker for investment and has neglected for some time to make inquiries as to such investment(u); and the usual clause indemnifying him against the acts or defaults of others will not protect him(v).

6. On the other hand, where money has been deposited in a bank pending investment, and not for an unnecessary length of time, the trustee will not be liable for the failure of the bank(w), for it is according to the common usage of mankind to make use of banks for the safe custody of their money.

7. So a trustee may appoint stewards, bailiffs, workmen, and other agents of the like kind, for there is a moral necessity for him to do so(x).

8. So where one executor lives at a distance from the testator's place of abode, he may remit money to his co-executor who lives in the immediate vicinity, for the purpose of paying the testator's debts, for "he is considered to do this of necessity. He could not transact business without trusting some person, and it would be impossible sidered as settled that, "if the receipt be given for the purpose of mere form, the signing will not charge the person not receiving; but if it be given under circumstances purporting that the money, though not actually received by both executors, was under the control of both, such a receipt shall charge; and the true question in these cases seems to have been whether the money was under the control of both executors" (k). An executor is, however, more strictly responsible than an ordinary trustee for any act by which he reduces any part of the testator's property into the sole possession of his co-executor (l).

11. Although a trustee may safely permit his co-trustee to receive trust moneys, he will, nevertheless, be liable if he permit him to retain them for a longer period than the circumstances of the case necessitate (m). Thus in Walker v. Symonds (n), D., one of three trustees, received part of the trust money, and, with the assent of the other trustees, invested it in East India Co.'s bills, payable to him. These were paid off, and thereupon S., another of the trustees, wrote to D., requesting him to invest the money. D., however, begged that it might remain in his hands on mortgage. The other trustees assented to this. The mortgage was, however, never prepared, although S. made frequent applications to D., who finally died insolvent five years after first receiving the money. Upon this state of facts Lord Eldon said: "The money was laid out with the consent of the trustees on India bills, payable to D., a palpable breach of trust, by placing the fund under his control, secured by little more than a promissory note payable to himself. It was probable that in 1793 the money due on the bills would be paid, and it would be lodged in his hands; and although the court will proceed as favourably as it can to trustees who have laid out the money on a security from which they cannot with activity recover it, yet no judge can say that they are not guilty of a breach of trust if they suffer it to lie out on such a security for so long a time. The trustees were guilty of a breach of trust in permitting the money to remain on bills payable to D. alone, and in leaving the state of the funds unascertained for five years."

ART. 36.—Trustees should obey the Terms of the Settlement.

Trustees are bound to carry out the duties prescribed by the settlement.

ILLUST.—1. Thus, if trustees are directed to call in trust-moneys, and to lay them out on a purchase, and they fail to do so, and the fund is lost, they are liable for the loss so sustained (a).

2. So if a trustee for sale omits to sell property when it ought to be sold, and it is afterwards lost, although without any default on his part, he is liable for the loss which would not have happened had he not failed in performing an obvious duty (b).

3. So where the settlement orders trust funds to be invested on particular securities, the trustees are bound so to invest them.

4. So where there are any conditions attached to the exercise of any of their functions, they must strictly perform those conditions. As for instance, where they are authorized to lend to a husband with the consent of his wife, they cannot make the advance without getting the required consent, even though he subsequently get it (c).

5. On the same principle, where an estate is given in trust for A. for life, and after his death upon trust to sell and pay the proceeds to another, the trustees cannot sell during the life of A., even with his consent, unless all the persons who are to receive the proceeds are sui juris and join in the sale; for the settlor, having prescribed the date of the sale, the trustees must follow out his direction (d).

ART. 37.—Trustees must not favour particular Cestuis que trust.

Trustees must honestly exercise their functions for the benefit of all parties claiming under the settlement, and must not favour individual cestuis que trust at the expense of the others (a).

ILLUST.—1. Thus where trustees are empowered to sell real estate and to lay out the proceeds in the purchase of another estate, they would not be justified in selling to promote the exclusive interests of the tenant for life; but they must look to the intention of the settlement, and whether another and better purchase is practicable, and not merely probable; or at all events there must be some strong reasons of family prudence (b).

2. Conversely, if lands be devised to trustees upon trust to sell for payment of debts, and subject thereto upon trusts for divers persons successively, the trustees must not raise the money by sale of the timber, for that would be a hardship on the tenant for life (c).

3. Where money is directed to be laid out in the purchase of land to be settled on a person for life with or without impeachment of waste, with remainders over, the trustees should not purchase an estate with an overwhelming proportion of trees on it, for if the tenant for life be impeachable for waste he would lose the fruit of so much as was the value of the timber; and if he be not impeachhe may decline to execute the trust, if he receives information making it doubtful whether he ought to execute it; and he has a right to have the direction of the court on the subject (c).

ILLUST.—1. In Newsome v. Flowers (sup.), a chapel was vested in trustees, in trust for Particular Baptists. Subsequently a schism took place, and part of the congregation seceded, and went to another chapel. Still later, the surviving trustees were induced (not knowing the real object) to appoint new trustees, and vest the property in them. Immediately afterwards, the new trustees, who were in fact attached to the seceding congregation, brought an action to obtain possession of the chapel. Their appointment was however set aside, and it was held that they could not raise the adverse claims of the seceders as a defence against the congregation of the chapel who were their cestuis que trust; Lord Romilly saying, “It is a common principle of law, that a tenant who has paid rent to his landlord cannot say, ‘You are not the owner of the property.’ The fact of his having paid rent prevents his doing it. The same thing occurs where persons are made trustees for the owner of property; if they acknowledge the trust for a considerable time, they cannot say that any other persons are their cestuis que trust.”

2. Nor, however honestly trustees may believe that the trust property belongs of right to a third party, are they justified in refusing to perform the trust they have once undertaken or in communicating with such other person on the subject; but they must assume the validity of the title of their cestuis que trust until it be impeached (d).

3. If however they believe that there is a bonâ fide claimant adverse to their cestuis que trust, and that they may make themselves personally liable in case they carry out the trust in favour of their cestuis que trust, they may, it would seem, come to the court for its direction, and in

(c) Neale v. Davis, 5 D., M. & G. 258.

(d) Beddoes v. Pugh, 26 B. 407; Lew. 253.

the meanwhile refuse to carry out the trust. The late Lord Justice Knight Bruce, however, energetically dissented from this view, saying: "Even if by paying the fund to their cestuis que trust they would make themselves personally liable to the adverse claimant in the event of his being successful, they were and are bound to perform the trust which they undertook" (e). The doctrine as enunciated in the rule has however been since assented to, and is at all events primâ facie correct (f).

ART. 39.—Investment of Trust Funds (a).

In the absence of express directions in the settlement, trustees can safely invest trust funds on the following securities only:—

a. On real securities, or in any of the government or bank annuities (b);

(a) It is apprehended that this article is a correct digest of the law of the court as modified by statute. The 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 32, gave trustees power to invest in the securities mentioned in sub-clause β , and that act has not been impliedly repealed, as appears from its confirmation by 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, s. 12, and 30 & 31 Vict. c. 132, ss. 1 and 2. By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145, s. 25, trustees of settlements executed after that date are empowered to invest in any of the parliamentary or public funds or government securities. This would, at first sight, seem to be restrictive of the powers of the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, but it is evidently not so, as that act is impliedly confirmed and extended by 30 & 31 Vict. c. 132, which enacts, that, except where expressly forbidden by the instrument creating the trust, it shall be lawful for every trustee, executor or administrator to invest any trust fund in his possession, or under his control, in any securities the interest of which is guaranteed by parliament, to the same extent and in the same manner as they may invest in East India Stock under sect. 1 of that act. This act, however, would seem to be subject, in the case of settlements executed since the 28th August, 1860, to the proviso in the article. At all events it would not be safe to assume that it was not. The act 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, s. 11, authorizing investment in any securities in which funds under the control of the court may be invested, has at present had no application, as such funds can only be invested in Bank Stock, East India Stock, Exchequer Bills, Two and a Half per Cent. Annuities, and mortgage of freeholds or copyholds.

β. Where under the circumstances it is reasonable and proper, in stock of the banks of England or Ireland, or in any (c) East India Stock (d), or in any security the interest of which may be guaranteed by parliament (e): Provided, that where the settlement is dated subsequently to the 28th August, 1860, and there is a person under no disability entitled in possession to receive the income of the trust fund for life, or for a term of years determinable with life, or for any greater estate, no investment can be made, except in consols, without his written consent (f).

ILLUSTR. 1.—Thus a trustee cannot (unless expressly authorized to do so) lend money on personal security, however apparently good (g), or however apparently trustworthy (h); and as Lord Kenyon said, in Holmes v. Dring (i), this “ought to be rung into the ears of every one who acts in the character of trustee.”

2. So, again, a trustee must not invest on trade security; as for instance in the shares of a public company, which are in reality no security at all, but merely documents conferring a right to speculative profits (k). It was on this ground, that before the passing of the acts of parliament before referred to, trustees were not entitled to invest even in stock of the Bank of England, or in East India Stock (l).

3. Where there is a tenant for life, and those in remainder object to funds being invested in East India Stock, it would not in general be considered “reasonable and proper” for trustees to invest in it; because the market price of that stock is usually higher than the rate at which it is refused to render their accounts; for an executor is said to have a right to have his accounts taken in court.

ART. 41.—Trustee must not make private Advantage out of Trust Property.

It is the duty of a trustee to act wholly and entirely for the benefit of his cestuis que trust, and without reference to his own interests; he must not make any use of the trust property for his own private purposes, even though he would thereby do no actual injury to it, or to the cestuis que trust (a); nor must an executive trustee purchase it (b) from himself, or his colleagues (c), however fair and honourable his intentions may be (d), unless by leave of the court acting for cestuis que trust who are not sui juris (e). He is also incapable of making a valid purchase even from his cestuis que trust so long as he remains a trustee, unless he can affirmatively prove that the cestuis que trust were fully and distinctly informed of, and understood the nature of, the transaction, and waived all objections, and that he disclosed to them all facts tending to enhance the value of the transaction (f). A trustee cannot, by retiring just before a sale takes place (with all his knowledge of the property fresh in his mind), thereby qualify himself to be a purchaser (g).

ILLUST.—1. Lord Eldon once directed an inquiry whether the right of sporting over the trust property could be let for the benefit of the cestuis que trust, and, if not, he thought that the game should belong to the heir of the settlor; the trustee might appoint a gamekeeper, if necessary, for the preservation of the game, but must not keep an establishment of mere pleasure for his own enjoyment (h).

2. So, again, it need hardly be pointed out that he must not actively import trust moneys into his trade or business, or use them in speculations of his own, and if he does so (as has been said before) he will be a constructive trustee of the profits, and if there be no profits he will be liable for the breach of trust, and will have to pay compound interest at five per cent., as will be seen hereafter (i). Where, however, there has been no active breach of trust, but only an omission on the part of a trustee, in whose business the settlor had money invested, to settle up the accounts, and properly invest the balance, such an omission will not make him liable to account for the profits (j).

3. The case of Sandford v. Keech which has been cited as the first illustration of Article 21, is another instance of the application of the rule now under consideration.

4. An agent employed for the sale of an estate cannot purchase it for himself, for he is a constructive trustee (k).

5. Trustees cannot lease or mortgage the trust estate to one of themselves, and if they do so the lessee will have to account for the profits (l).

6. The rule as to selling to himself, only applies where the express or constructive trustee is in the nature of an executive trustee, for where he is the mere depository of the legal estate without any duties, he may be a purchaser. For instance, trustees to preserve contingent remainders (m), or persons nominated trustees who have disclaimed (n). But one who was originally an executive trustee, and has become a mere bare trustee by performance of the trusts, would, it is apprehended, be disqualified; for he would have had an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the property and its value, and if he chose to conceal that value it might be impossible to establish it against him (o).

7. In reference to sales by the cestuis que trust, the transaction was upheld where a cestui que trust took the whole management of a sale upon himself, and then agreed to sell a lot, which he had bought in, to one of the trustees for sale (p).

8. So where a client was very desirous of selling property, and after vainly endeavouring to do so, finally sold it to his solicitor (who was of course a constructive trustee), and it was proved that the transaction was fair and the price adequate, and indeed more than could have been obtained elsewhere at the time, and the client quite understood his position, it was held that such a sale was good and binding, although it lay upon the solicitor to prove that it was unimpeachable (q).

9. The rule as to the extreme fairness to be observed in purchasing from cestuis que trust does not apply to persons who are only constructive trustees by virtue of some business contract entered into with the so-called cestuis que trust. Thus, mortgagees can freely purchase from their mortgagors (r), partners from the representatives of a deceased partner (s), and other persons bearing similar relations enjoy a similar freedom; for though contracting parties may by a metaphor be said to be trustees for each other, the trust is strictly limited by the contract. They

the position of a solicitor might, if allowed to perform the duties of a solicitor and to be paid for them, find it very often proper to institute and carry on legal proceedings which he would not do if he were to derive no emolument from them himself, and if he were to employ another person.”

2. Nor in general will a trustee, whether express or constructive, be permitted to claim a salary or any remuneration for managing a trade or business (i).

3. But this does not apply to one who rightfully becomes possessed of another's money and rightfully trades with it; for he will be entitled to a reasonable remuneration, although he is of course a constructive trustee of the profits of the trade (k). For instance, in Brown v. Litton (l) the plaintiff's testator was the captain of a ship, who being on a voyage, had 800 dollars which he intended to invest in trade. The captain died, and the defendant, who was the mate of the ship, becoming captain in his place, took possession of these 800 dollars, and by judiciously trading with them made considerable profits. Upon a bill being filed against him for an account, the Lord Keeper Harcourt said: “He ought clearly to account for the profits made of the money; the primary intention in carrying abroad this money, was to invest it in trade, and not to return with it home again, and therefore the defendant having observed the intent of the testator in trading therewith, and having taken such a prudent care in the management of it as (it may be presumed) he would have taken of his own money, the defendant would not have been liable for any loss that might have happened, and to recompense him for his care in trading with it, the master shall settle a proper salary for the pains and trouble he has been at in the management thereof.”

SUB-DIVISION IV.

THE POWERS AND AUTHORITY OF A TRUSTEE.

ART. 43.—General Authority of a Trustee.

IN addition to the power and authority expressly given to him by the settlement, and subject to any restrictions contained therein, a trustee may, without application to the court, do such acts as the court would sanction if applied to (a). No rule can be laid down as to what acts the court will sanction, as that must depend upon the particular circumstances of each case; but in general the court will sanction—

α . Acts which are reasonable and proper for the realization, protection, or benefit of the trust property (b); and β . Acts which are reasonable and proper for the protection, safety, support, or reputation of a cestui que trust who is incapable of taking care of himself or herself (c):

Provided, that such acts do not benefit one cestui que trust at the expense of another or others (d), and do not interfere with any legal beneficial interest.

ILLUST.—1. Thus, in Ward v. Ward (e), where, by the immediate realization of the trust property, the trustee would have ruined one cestui que trust from whom a large debt was due to the trust estate, and would have very seriously prejudiced others, and instead of doing so, the trustee made an arrangement with the debtor for payment of the money by instalments, it was held, that he was justified in having taken that course, because he had exercised a sound discretion, and such as the court would have approved of.

2. So, again, as was said by Lord Cottenham in Bright v. North (f), every trustee is entitled to be allowed the reasonable and proper expenses incurred in protecting property committed to his care. But if they have a right to protect property from immediate and direct injury, they must have the same right where the injury threatened is indirect but probable; and, therefore, his lordship allowed the trustees (who were, in that instance, trustees of public works) the expenses of opposing a bill in parliament which would have been prejudicial to those works if passed.

3. So, again, in cases where the court would, if applied to, authorize the cutting down of timber which has arrived at maturity, and which would only degenerate if allowed to stand; or where it is necessary to cut it for the purpose of thinning it, the trustee may fell it on his own authority (g).

4. On the same principle, a trustee who has the management of property, may grant a reasonable agricultural lease (h), unless expressly or impliedly (i) restrained from doing so by the settlement; but he may not grant a mining lease, for that would benefit the tenant for life at the expense of the reversioner (k).

5. On the other hand, trustees must not do acts, however beneficial they may possibly be to the property, if they are in their nature unreasonable and problematical. For instance, they ought not to make merely ornamental improve-of the capital; but a trustee would not be wise to take upon himself the responsibility of breaking into the capital (v).

8. Upon the same principle, a trustee may apply part of an infant's capital for its advancement in the world (w).

9. But where, by making an advancement, the trustee would injure the contingent rights of another cestui que trust, he will do it at his peril as against such other (x). For instance, where 100*l.* was bequeathed, upon trust to apply the income towards the maintenance and education of A. during his minority, and upon trust to pay the corpus to him on attaining twenty-one, but in case of his dying before that age, upon trust for X., it was held that, as against X., the trustees had no authority to advance part of the capital to A., who died before attaining his majority (y).

10. On the principle that the court in general cannot interfere with legal interests, it is apprehended that a trustee for another for life only (the trustee merely taking an estate per autre vie) would not be justified, without the consent of the legal remainderman, in cutting timber which had arrived at maturity (as in Illustration 3), inasmuch as, not being the trustee for the remainderman, he could not do acts for the benefit of the estate generally which would be in derogation of the latter's legal rights (z); nor could he invest the proceeds so as to equitably arrange the benefit between the tenant for life and the remainderman.

tenance to infants contingently entitled, Re Cotton, L. R., 1 Ch. Div. 232, in cases where upon their shares becoming vested they would be entitled to past income, Re George, L. R., 5 Ch. Div. 837.

(y) Lee v. Brown, 4 V. 362.

(z) See and consider Seagram v. Knight, L. R., 2 Ch. 630, and compare with Waldo v. Waldo, 7 Sim. 261, and Gent v. Harrison, John. 517.

ART. 44.—Implied Powers of Trustees under recent Settlements.

The trustees of every settlement executed since the 28th August, 1860, can exercise the powers set out in Lord Cranworth's Act in relation to the conduct of sales and exchanges of real estate, the conveyance thereof to the purchaser, and the investment of the purchase-money, and also in relation to the renewal of renewable leaseholds, the raising of money for the purposes of the settlement, the maintenance of infant cestuis que trust, and the accumulation of the income: Provided, that the settlement does not expressly negative the exercise of such powers (a).

Obs.—The reader must not assume that trustees of settlements prior to August, 1860, had not any of these powers, for, in point of fact, as we have seen, trustees possessed most of them. But the act has defined, and put into a concrete form, powers which were formerly exercisable by trustees with more or less risk, inasmuch as their exercise was not so much a matter of absolute discretion, as a question of what was, under the circumstances, such an act as would meet with the approval of the court. Some of the powers are however quite new, such as the power to give valid receipts for purchase-money.

ART. 45.—Delegation of the Powers of a Trustee.

A power involving the exercise of special personal discretion or confidence, can only be validly executed by the persons nominated for that purpose, except in cases of absolute necessity (b); but a power to do a merely ministerial act, and involving no personal discretion, may be delegated (b).

ILLUST.—1. Thus, a power of leasing cannot be delegated, for in its exercise much judgment is required. The fitness and responsibility of the lessee, the adequacy of the rent, the length of the term to be granted, and the nature of the covenants, stipulations and conditions which the lease should contain, are matters requiring knowledge and prudence (c).

2. But a trustee may appoint an attorney merely to pass the legal estate, as such an act involves no discretion (d). And where trustees had power to elect a clergyman, it was held that they could not appoint proxies to vote; but when the choice was once made, they could appoint proxies for the purpose of signing the formal presentation (e).

3. A power to give valid receipts and discharges is a power involving confidence, and a receipt given by an agent or proxy (even though he be a co-trustee) will be invalid (f).

4. The rule as to the impossibility of delegating discretionary or confidential powers is so stringent, that where a settlement contains no power to appoint new trustees with similar powers to those conferred on the trustees appointed by the settlor, it is not even competent for the court to confer such powers upon new trustees, save only where the power is so interwoven with the trust itself, that there can be no execution of the trust without the exercise of the power, in which case the power must of necessity be exercised by the new trustees (g).

5. Thus, where there are trustees for sale, with a power to give valid discharges for the purchase-money, and it had been made in a creditors' suit, for the administration of the personal estate of a testator, but no receiver had been appointed, nor any injunction granted to restrain the executrix from dealing with the assets. More than two years after the decree, the executrix, who was also the sole legatee, opened an account with a bank as such executrix. The account becoming overdrawn, she deposited with the bank a picture, belonging to the testator's estate, by way of security. It was contended, that although the bank had no notice of the suit, yet that it being a lis pendens, they ought to have searched the register. But Lord Justice James said: "In my opinion, the executrix had the legal right to make such a deposit. In order to deprive them (the bank) of the benefit of it, there must be evidence to show that they had notice of there being some breach of trust in the transaction. Now it appears to me that the bankers did nothing but what was in the usual course of business, and that there is nothing to fix them with any notice of a breach of trust. The doctrine of lis pendens has no bearing on the case; for a mere administration decree, no receiver having been appointed, nor any injunction granted to prevent the executrix from dealing with the assets, would not take away her legal powers so as to invalidate the title of persons claiming under a disposition made by her in exercise of those powers."

SUB-DIVISION V.

THE AUTHORITY OF THE CESTUIS QUE TRUST.

ART. 47.—The Authority of the Cestui que trust in a Simple Trust.

THE cestui que trust in a simple trust is entitled to have the legal estate vested in him or his assignee (a).

ART. 48.—The Authority of One of several Cestuis que trust partially interested in a Special Trust.

The authority of one of several cestuis que trust in a special trust, who is only partially and not absolutely entitled to the trust property, in general depends upon the terms of the trust as construed by the court; but if sui juris, the cestui que trust cannot be restrained from assigning his or her interest, save only in the case of a married woman, who may by apt words in the settlement be restrained from doing so during her coverture, but not afterwards (b).

ILLUST.—1. In Tidd v. Lister (c), real and personal property was devised and bequeathed to trustees, upon trust to pay debts and funeral expenses, to keep the buildings on the real estate insured, to satisfy the premiums upon certain policies effected on the lives of the testator's sons, to allow each of his sons an annuity, and, subject thereto, in trust for his daughter for life, with divers remainders over. The personal estate sufficed to pay all but the insurance premiums, and the daughter, who was a feme covert, filed a bill praying to be let into possession, upon securing the amount of the premiums of the policies. But Sir John Leach refused her request, on the ground that the testator had placed the direction of the property in the hands of the trustees, which was for the advantage of those who were to take in succession, and that a court of equity ought not to disappoint the testator's intention by delivering over the possession to the tenant for life, unprotected against her natural tendency to favour herself at the expense of those in remainder. "There may be cases in which it is plain, from the expressions in the will, that the testator did not intend the property should remain under the personal management of the trustees: there may be cases in which it is plain from the nature of the property that the testator could not mean to exclude the cestui que trust for life from the personal possession of the property; as in the case of a family residence. There may be very special cases in which the court would deliver the possession of the property to the cestui que trust for life, although the testator's intention appeared to be that it should remain with the trustees; as where the personal occupation of the trust property is beneficial to the cestui que trust, in which case the court, by taking means to secure the due protection of those in remainder, would, in substance, be performing the trust according to the intention of the testator."

2. The interest of a cestui que trust (save only in the case of a married woman during her coverture) cannot be made inalienable (d), except by means of a shifting clause giving it over, or practically giving it over, to some other person upon alienation (e); in which case, the real interest of the cestui que trust is merely contingent. The contingency upon which it ceases being an attempt at

into a simple trust; for the cestuis que trust are in equity the absolute owners (a), save only in the case of a married woman restrained from anticipation, who is during her coverture incapable of dealing with her interest (b).

ILLUSTR.—1. Thus where a testator gave his residuary personal estate to J. J., an infant, and directed his executors to place it out at interest to accumulate, and to pay the principal to the infant on his attaining twenty-four, and in the meantime to allow 60*l.* a year for his maintenance, and the testator gave the residue over on the infant's dying under twenty-one; the court held that the residue was absolutely given to the infant on his attaining twenty-one, and that, therefore, he was entitled to have the residue and accumulations at once transferred to him (c).

2. And so in Magrath v. Morehead (d), the settlor by his will directed his property to be divided into nine shares, and gave one and a half share to each of his two daughters, "to be settled on themselves at their marriage." The two daughters having attained twenty-one, and being unmarried, it was held that they were entitled to their shares absolutely.

3. In Gosling v. Gosling (e), a testator by codicil, after devising an estate in Surrey to his trustees, upon trust for certain persons, concluded as follows: "It is my particular desire, that no one shall be put in possession of my estate, or shall enjoy the rent, dividends and profits of any part thereof, or of any property left by my will or codicil, until he shall attain the age of twenty-five years; and in the meantime the rents, dividends, and profits to accumulate." A devisee claimed to have the estate transferred to him before attaining twenty-five, and Vice-Chancellor Page Wood said: "The principle of this court has always been to recognize the right of all persons who attain the age of twenty-one to enter upon the absolute use and enjoyment of the property given to them by a will, notwithstanding any directions by the testator to the effect that they are not to enjoy it until a later age, unless, during the interval, the property is given for the benefit of another. If the property is once theirs, it is useless for the testator to attempt to impose any fetter upon their enjoyment of it in full, so soon as they attain twenty-one. And upon that principle, unless there is in the will, or in some codicil to it, a clear indication of an intention on the part of the testator, not only that his devisees are not to have the enjoyment of the property he has devised to them, until they attain twenty-five, but that some other person is to have that enjoyment, or unless the property is so clearly taken away from the devisees up to the time of their attaining twenty-five, as to induce the court to hold that, as to the previous rents and profits, there has been an intestacy, the court does not hesitate to strike out of the will any direction that the devisees shall not enjoy it in full until they attain the age of twenty-five years." The learned Vice-Chancellor therefore allowed the plaintiff's claim.

4. Again, in Re Brown (f) there was a bequest of consols in trust to purchase a life annuity for a lady, to be held for her separate use without power of anticipation; and in case of her illness or incapacity, the testator gave the trustees a discretionary power as to the application of the annuity for her maintenance. The legatee being unmarried, and the restraint on anticipation being therefore nugatory, it was held that she was entitled to a transfer of the consols (g).

5. A similar result follows where the legatee, restrained

So where a testatrix gave a sum of 20,000*l.* stock, to be laid out by the trustees of her will in the purchase of a government annuity, in the name and for the benefit of her godson for the term of his natural life, and directed that the annuitant should not be entitled to have the value of his annuity in lieu thereof, and that if he should sell it, it should cease, and form part of her residuary estate, it was held that the annuitant was absolutely entitled to the annuity, and that he could make a good title to it to a purchaser (l).

7. On similar principles, where an estate is directed to be sold and the proceeds to be divided amongst several persons, no one singly can elect that his own share shall not be disposed of, but shall remain realty (m); for the other undivided shares would not sell so beneficially; but if all of them agree to take the land unconverted, they can insist upon their right to do so (n).

is a naked power given to two persons, that will not survive to one of them unless there be express words or a necessary implication. . . . When, on the other hand, a testator gives his property, not to one party subject to a power in others, but to trustees upon special trusts, with a direction to carry his purposes into effect, it is the duty of the trustee to execute the trust. If an estate be devised to A. and B. upon trust to sell, and thereby raise such a sum, it is, I think, a novel argument, that after A.'s death B. cannot sell the estate and execute the trust" (e).

ART. 51.—Devolution of the Office of Executive Trustee on Death of the last Survivor.

Upon the death of a last surviving trustee, intestate as to the trust estate, it depends upon the language of the settlement whether his heir or personal representative, as the case may be, can execute a special trust. If it is to be collected from the settlement that the office was intended to be a personal one, it does not devolve on the heir or personal representative. If, on the other hand, the trust is directed to be performed by the trustee, his heirs, executors, &c., it will devolve on those persons.

ILLUST.—1. Thus where the settlor gives personal property to A. B. upon certain trusts, then upon the death of A. B., although the estate vests in his executor, the latter will be unable to execute the trusts; for, as was said by Lord Cottenham in Mortimer v. Ireland (a), "whether the property is real or personal is no matter; for suppose a man appoints a trustee of real and personal estate simpliciter, adding nothing more, this cannot make his representative a trustee. . . . The property may vest in the representative, but that is quite another question from his being trustee."

2. But where leaseholds were assigned to two trustees, their executors and administrators, then upon the death of the survivor, his executors or administrators can carry out the trust, unless (it is said) he has himself expressly or impliedly forbidden the doing so, as by bequeathing the leaseholds to another, and so going out of his way to prevent them devolving upon the executors or administrators (z).

ART. 52.—Devise of the Office of Trustee.

When a last surviving executive trustee devises the trust property, the devisee can only execute the trust if it was by the settlement confided to the trustees and their assigns (a). In the absence of these words, new trustees must be appointed (b).

ILLUST.—1. Thus if the settlor vest the trust property in A. and his heirs, upon trust that A. and his heirs shall sell, and A. dies and devises the trust property to B., new trustees must be appointed to carry out the sale; for B. cannot sell, inasmuch as there was no power given by the settlement to A.'s assigns to carry out the trust; and A.'s heir cannot sell, because by devising the estate to B., A. deprived him of the character of heir (c).

2. And so again, where (d) personalty was assigned to trustees, their executors and administrators, in trust, and the surviving trustee bequeathed it to A. and B., and appointed A., B. and C. his executors, it was held that A. and B. could not execute the trust, for the trustee had no power to bequeath it; nor could A., B. and C. as executors execute it, for by bequeathing the property to A. and B. alone, the trustee had deprived his executors of the trust. It is suggested that where real property is vested in one and his heirs, upon trust that he and his executors carry out certain directions, and the trustee devises it to another, such devise, although nugatory, would not deprive the executors of the trust; for it would not deprive them of the estate, which would, in the absence of the devise, have descended to the heir and not devolved upon them.

3. Where the trust property was confided to a trustee, his heirs and assigns, it was held, that although the settlement contained a power to appoint new trustees, the word assigns might reasonably be construed to give the trustee a discretionary power of preventing the inconvenience which might attend the devolution of the trust upon his heir (z).

ART. 53.—Retirement and Removal of a Trustee.

Where the settlement contains no power to appoint new trustees, and it is dated before the 28th day of August, 1860 (a), a trustee can only be discharged from his office—

α. With the consent of himself and all his cestuis que trust, who must, in order to give a valid consent, be sui juris (b); or

β. By the court, which will act at the instance of the trustee, or at the instance of any of the cestuis que trust where the trustee has behaved improperly (c), or is incapable of acting properly (d), or is a felon (e), or a bankrupt (f), or is residing execution of the trust. As already stated, if the circumstances preventing his continuing to perform his duties arose from any act of his own, or anything relating to himself, I think he ought to pay the costs of the appointment of a new trustee; but if the persons upon whom the appointment of a new trustee depends absolutely refuse to take steps for that purpose, what is he to do? In my opinion, the only course he could take was to say what every trustee may say, 'I will apply to, and have the trust executed by the court, and I will ask to be discharged from the trusts as incidental to that relief.' "

ART. 54.—Appointment of new Trustees by the Court.

Whenever it is expedient to appoint a trustee or trustees, whether of a settlement of which no trustees were originally appointed (a), or the original trustees of which have died, retired, or been removed, and it is found inexpedient, difficult, or impracticable to do so without the assistance of the court, the court may appoint such a trustee or trustees (b), and may, by order, vest in such new trustees or trustee any lands (c) subject to the trust (d), and the right to call for the transfer of any stock, or to receive the dividends thereof, and the right to sue for and recover any chose in action, or any interest in respect thereof (e).

ART. 55.—Express Power to appoint new Trustees.

Where there is an express power to appoint new trustees contained in the settlement (and such a power is implied in every settlement executed since the 28th August, 1860 (a), such a power must be executed strictly (b). But unless there clearly appears to be an intention to the contrary (c), the original number of trustees may be increased or diminished (d).

ILLUST.—1. Thus, where the power was vested in “the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee, or the heirs, executors, or administrators of the last surviving and continuing trustee,” and the two trustees were desirous of retiring, it was held that they could not do so by appointing two new trustees in their place by one deed, but that one must appoint a new trustee in the place of the first retiring trustee, and then the new trustee must appoint one in the place of the second retiring trustee (e). This case is a singular instance of that verbal subtlety which makes men of the world so distrustful of legal interpretation. It all turned upon the idea, that trustees who were about to retire could not be said to be continuing, but that if one retired first, the other would be a continuing trustee, although he might intend to retire the next day. If, in addition to the words “surviving and continuing,” the words “or other trustee or trustees” had been added, the two retiring trustees might have appointed two new ones by the same deed (f).

2. So again, the words “unfit and incapable” are very strictly construed. Thus, where a new trustee was to be appointed if a trustee became incapable of acting, it was held that the bankruptcy of one of the trustees did not fulfil the condition, as it only rendered him unfit but not of opinion that this liability ought, as between the trustee and the estate, to be borne by the estate.”

2. So again, a trustee or executor will be allowed the amount of a solicitor's bill of costs which he has paid for services rendered in the matter of the trust (e).

3. But where a receiver (who is, of course, a constructive trustee) made several journeys to Paris, in order that he might be present at the hearing of a suit brought in the French courts in relation to the trust property, and it appeared that his presence was wholly needless, the whole question being one of French law, and not of fact, his travelling expenses were disallowed, on the ground that they were under the circumstances improperly incurred (f).

4. And so where trustees attempted, at the solicitation of their cestuis que trust, some of whom were married women without power of anticipation, to sell the trust property before the date named in the settlement, it was held that they were not entitled to be indemnified against the costs of an action for specific performance brought against them by the purchaser (g).

ART. 57.—Protection against the Acts of Co-trustee.

A trustee is not answerable for the receipts, acts, or defaults of his co-trustee (a), save only:—

α . Where he has handed the trust property to him without seeing to its proper application.

β . Where he allows him to receive the trust property without making due inquiry as to his dealing with it.

γ . Where he becomes aware of a breach of trust, either committed or meditated, and abstains from taking the needful steps to obtain restitution and redress, or to prevent the meditated wrong.

(a) Dawson v. Clarke, 18 V. 254; and as to settlements made since, see 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 31.

And even in these three cases he may, by express declaration in the settlement, be made irresponsible (b).

ILLUST.—Thus in the case of Wilkins v. Hogg (c), which now governs the subject, a testatrix, after appointing three trustees, declared that each of them should be answerable only for losses arising from his own default and not for involuntary acts or for the acts or defaults of his co-trustees, and particularly that any trustee who should pay over to his co-trustees, or should do or concur in any act enabling his co-trustees to receive any monies for the general purposes of her will, should not be obliged to see to the due application thereof, nor should such trustee be subsequently rendered liable by any express notice or intimation of the actual misapplication of the same monies. The three trustees joined in signing and giving receipts to two insurance companies for two sums of money paid by them, but two of the trustees permitted their co-trustee to obtain the money without ascertaining whether he had invested it. This trustee having misapplied it, it was sought to make his co-trustees responsible, but Lord Westbury held that they were not; saying, “There are three modes in which a trustee would become liable according to the ordinary rules of law—first, where, being the recipient, he hands over the money without securing its due application; secondly, where he allows a co-trustee to receive money without making due inquiry as to his dealing with it; and thirdly, where he becomes aware of a breach of trust, either committed or meditated, and abstains from taking the needful steps to obtain restitution or redress. The framer of the clause under examination knew these three rules, and used words sufficient to meet all these cases.

(b) As to the whole of the article, see judgment of Westbury, L. C., in Wilkins v. Hogg, 3 Giff. 116; 8 Jur., N. S. 25; and see also Dix v. Burford, 19 B. 409; Mucklow v. Fuller, Jac. 198; Brumridge v. Brumridge, 27 B. 5.

(c) Supra.

There remained therefore only personal misconduct, in respect of which a trustee acting under this will would be responsible. He would still be answerable for collusion if he handed over trust money to his co-trustee with reasonable ground for believing or suspicion that that trustee would commit a breach of trust; but no such case as this was made by the bill."

ART. 58.—Trustee without Notice not bound to pay to Persons claiming through Cestui que trust.

If the person who is really entitled to trust property is not the cestui que trust who appears on the face of the settlement, but some one who claims through him, and the trustees, having neither express nor constructive notice of such derivative title, pay upon the footing of the original title, they cannot be made to pay over again (a).

ILLUSTR.—Thus, in Leslie v. Baillie (b), a testator, who died and whose will was proved in England, bequeathed a legacy to a married woman, whose domicile, as well as that of her husband, was in Scotland. The husband died a few months after the testator, without having received the legacy. After his decease the executors of the testator, with knowledge of the before-mentioned circumstances of domicile, paid the legacy to the widow. It was proved that, according to the Scotch law, the payment should have been made to the husband's personal representatives. It was however held, that in the absence of proof that the executors of the settlor knew the Scotch law on the subject, the payment to the widow was a good payment.

of the stock into court, and were allowed time to retransfer the remainder. The wife then died, having by her will appointed the stock to the husband. He then filed a bill against the trustees, claiming the stock under the appointment, and praying for the same relief as his wife might have had. It is needless to say that his claim was promptly rejected (i).

2. A formal release under seal, or an express confirmation, will of course estop a cestui que trust from instituting subsequent proceedings; and it would seem that any positive act or expression indicative of a clear intention to waive a breach of trust, will, if supported by valuable consideration (however slight), be equivalent to a release (k).

3. An infant or a feme covert (unless in respect of her separate estate vested in her unreservedly (l)) cannot loose his or her right to relief, either by concurrence or release. And it has been considered that where a trust fund was settled upon trust for such persons as a feme covert should appoint, and in the meantime to her for her separate use for life, and she acquiesced in a breach of trust, her appointees could claim relief although she herself could not (m). It is, however, submitted that this case was wrongly decided, inasmuch as a feme covert, with a general power of appointment, is practically as much the absolute owner of the property as if it were conveyed to her absolutely; and indeed this latter view has been since adopted (n).

4. Where, however, property is settled upon a married woman simply, and not to her separate use, or where it is settled to her separate use, but she is restrained from alienating or anticipating it (o), she is not competent to consent to or to release a breach of trust, and her concurrence or release will afford no protection to the trustee. For instance, where money is settled upon a husband for life, remainder to his wife for life or absolutely, her concurrence in a breach of trust during the life of her husband would have no effect. Neither would it if she were the tenant in possession to her separate use if she were restrained from anticipation; for, as was said by Vice-Chancellor Malins in Stanley v. Stanley (p), “In no case, and by no device whatever, can the restraint upon anticipation be evaded.” The principle was very vigorously expressed by Lord Langdale in Tyler v. Tyler (q), in a passage which ought to be learnt by heart by every trustee. “We find,” said his lordship, “a married woman throwing herself at the feet of the trustee, begging and entreating him to advance a sum of money out of the trust fund, to save her husband and her family from utter ruin, and making out a most plausible case for that purpose; his compassionate feelings are worked upon, he raises and advances the money, the object for which it was given entirely fails, the husband becomes bankrupt, and in a few months the very same woman who induced the trustee to do this, files a bill in the Court of Chancery to compel him to make good that loss to the trust. These are cases which, when they happen, shock everybody’s feelings at the time; but it is necessary that relief should be given in such cases, for if relief were not given, and if such rights were not strictly maintained, no such things as a trust could ever be preserved.”

5. A married woman is, however, legally responsible for a fraud, and her ordinary incapacity will not avail her; but if the property were settled upon her without power of anticipation, her fraud will not prejudice her (r). A settlement was made on the marriage of a female infant, whereby the husband covenanted to induce her to settle her real estate upon attaining twenty-one, and to concur in such settlement himself. He neglected to do so however, and they subsequently mortgaged the real estate, but the mortgagee had no notice of the covenant until just before the deed was acknowledged. It was held, that the wife's fraud in not disclosing the existence of the settlement bound her estate, and bound her not to consent to the settlement which the husband had covenanted that he would induce her to settle (s).

ART. 60.—Laches of the Cestuis que trust when a bar to Relief.

The Statutes of Limitation do not apply to declared trusts (a) (except where they are created by way of a charge on real estate, unconnected with a duty (b)), nor to trusts which on the face of a written instrument are resulting trusts (c), although they are applicable to other constructive trusts (d); but in taking an account for the purpose of charging a trustee with personal liability, every fair allowance ought to be made in his favour if it can be shown that he acted bonâ fide, and that the claim sought to be enforced is one which arose many years ago, and one of the nature and particulars of which the cestuis que trust was, at the time when it arose, perfectly cognizant (e).

ILLUST.—1. If land be devised to a person upon trust to receive the rents and thereout to pay certain annuities, the surplus rents result to the heir-at-law upon the face of end to it for some years. It was held that after the expiration of the trust, the trustee could not be called upon to make up the deficiency (n). It would, however, seem that a mere knowledge, without suing for a few years, as for ten years, will not destroy the right (o), particularly where the trustee has not acted bonâ fide.

6. So again, in Jones v. Higgins (p), it was declared in a marriage settlement that a sum of money, then in the hands of the lady's brother, should be held by three trustees, one of whom was the brother, upon trust at the request in writing of the lady to pay to her the whole or any part absolutely, and until such request upon trust, when and as the same should come into their hands, to invest the same and pay the interest to the wife for life for her separate use, and after her decease as she should by will appoint, and in default of appointment to her husband. The money was allowed to remain for thirteen years in the hands of the brother, who paid the interest to the husband, and also paid him part of the principal, with the wife's knowledge. The husband died, the brother became insolvent, and the wife filed a bill against the trustees; but it was held, that although the trustees had been guilty of a breach of trust, the wife was debarred from relief on account of her long acquiescence.

7. So, wherever it is for the general convenience that a suit in respect of a long dormant grievance should be disallowed, the court will refuse relief on the ground that "Expedit reipublicæ ut sit finis litium" (q). For instance, where a plaintiff seeks to set aside a purchase from him by his solicitor, a delay of less than twenty years may bar the right to relief, if it would be inconvenient to grant it (r); or where, in an action for an account, the plaintiff by lying by has rendered it impossible or greatly inconvenient for the defendant to render the account he calls for, he will get no relief (s).

ART. 61.—The Gainer by a Breach of Trust must pro tanto indemnify Trustee.

As between the trustees and a third person who has reaped the benefit of a breach of trust, the latter must indemnify the former to the extent of the property actually received by him under the breach of trust (a); and where he is a cestui que trust the trustees will have a lien on his share for such amount (b).

ILLUST. 1.—Thus, personalty was bequeathed upon trust for tenants for life, with executory trusts in remainder, but without directions as to investment. The trustees, at the instance of the tenants for life, invested on mortgage of a precarious nature, in consequence of which the tenants for life received a far larger income; but the corpus of the estate was in the result greatly depreciated. The trustees having been ordered to refund the loss to the trust property, claimed to be generally indemnified by the tenants for life who had reaped the benefit of the breach; and their claim was allowed, but only to the extent of the property actually received by the trustees in consequence of the improper investment (c).

2. And so, if the trustees by mistake pay capital to the tenant for life, instead of income, they must of course make the loss good to the trust property; but they will, nevertheless, be entitled to be recouped out of the life interest (x).

ART. 62.—Trustee has a Right to Discharge on Completion of his Duties.

Upon the completion of the trust a trustee is entitled to have his accounts examined and settled by the cestuis que trust, and either to have a formal discharge given to him or to have the accounts taken in court. He cannot, however, demand a release under seal (y).

ILLUST.—Thus, a trustee on finally transferring stock to a cestui que trust demanded from the latter a deed of release. The cestui que trust, however, refused to give him anything except a simple receipt for the amount of stock actually transferred, which, of course, left it open to him to say that that amount was not the amount to which he was entitled. The court held, that no deed was demandable; the Vice-Chancellor saying: “But though it may not have been the right of the trustee to require a deed, I think that it was his right to require that his account should be settled; that is to say, that he and his family should be delivered from the anxiety and misery attending unsettled accounts, and the possible ruin, which they who are acquainted with the affairs daily litigated in the Court of Chancery well know to be a frequent result of neglect in such a matter. . . . He was bound to give an account if demanded, but giving the accounts he was entitled (to use a familiar phrase) to have them wound up. It is true that the accounts, though settled, might be liable to be surcharged and falsified. That might or might not be, but still the trustee had a right to have his accounts gone through, executed, and settled. . . . If the plaintiff was satisfied upon the accounts as sent in

2. But where trustees were authorized to invest trust monies in the purchase of lands, and they presented a petition asking the court for its advice as to the application of a further portion of the trust monies to the permanent improvement of the lands, the court, not having the requisite machinery for investigating the details, refused to give any advice (m).

3. Where the case is hypothetical, and not present,—as, for instance, where the question asked was as to the incidence of future calls which might be made on account of shares bequeathed—the court will give no advice, and will order the petition to stand over until the event happens (n).

ART. 64.—Craving the administrative Assistance of the Court.

Trustees (o) may relieve themselves of responsibility in the following cases, and to the following extent:

α. Where the trust property consists of money, or annuities, or stocks standing in their names at the Bank of England, or in the East India Company, or the South Sea Company, or in any government or parliamentary securities, the trustees, or the majority (α) of them, may, on filing an affidavit shortly describing the settlement according to the best of their knowledge and belief, and with the privity of the paymaster-general of the Chancery Division of the High Court, pay such money into the said bank to the account of the said paymaster-general, in the matter of the particular trust, or transfer or deposit such stocks or securities into or in the name of such paymaster-general, to attend the orders of the court. The receipt of one of the cashiers of the said bank for money, or, in the case of stocks or securities, the certificate of the proper officer, that they have been transferred or deposited, is a sufficient discharge to the trustees (b), who are thereby released from seeing to the future application of that particular fund, but are not released from the office of trustee (c);

β. Where the trust property is not of the kind aforesaid, or where the trustee wishes to be discharged from the office of trustee, he may institute a suit for the administration of the trust by the court (d).

Provided that where the equities are perfectly clear and unambiguous (e), or he merely craves to be released from caprice or laziness, or is otherwise not justified in the course he has pursued (f), he will have to pay all the costs; and even where he acts bonâ fide, but without any real cause, he will not be allowed his own costs (g). And where he brings a suit, when the same object might have been obtained by payment into the bank, he will not be allowed the extra costs occasioned thereby (h); and he will always appeal from an order of the court at his own risk (i).

money into court where he cannot get a valid discharge ; as, for instance, where the cestuis que trust are infants (e) or lunatics (f).

2. So, where under a creditor's deed money was claimed both by the settlor and the creditors, the trustee was held to have been justified in paying the money into court (g).

3. So, a trustee may properly pay money into court where it is claimed by the representative of a cestui que trust ; for non constat, but that the cestui que trust may have disposed of it (h). On the other hand, it has been said (i) that a trustee ought not to hesitate to pay the money to a cestui que trust who claims in default of appointment, if he has good reason to believe that the power has never been exercised ; Jessel, M.R., saying : “ If there had been no such case as Re Wyllly's Trusts (k), and no such opinion as that referred to, I should probably have made the trustees pay the costs of the transfer of the fund into court. They had no notice of any appointment by the lady, and no ground for believing that any appointment had been made. The solicitor, who had acted for Mrs. Cull from the time of her marriage, wrote to say that there was not the slightest ground for supposing that she had made any appointment. The trustees had, therefore, fully discharged their duty, and I am of opinion that they could not have been made liable if they had then paid over the fund to the petitioner, even if an appointment had been subsequently discovered. In the case of Re Wyllly's Trusts the late Master of the Rolls said : ‘ The trustees had a is clear that the court will incline towards the payment of the costs of trustees when they act in a bonâ fide way, yet, on the other hand, it is most important that trustees should not incur unnecessary expenses for the purpose of relieving themselves of all liability, and particularly so when there is no reasonable doubt in their way." His honor, therefore, ordered the trustees to pay the costs of all parties (n).

7. Trustees may properly institute a suit where there is a dispute as to the interests of the cestuis que trust in real property; as, for instance, where the settlor was tenant in tail of the property, and disentailed it by an assurance, the validity of which is disputed (o).

8. And so it was said in Goodson v. Ellison (p), that a trustee under an old trust creating successive limitations of equitable interests, some of which had failed, was entitled, before he could be required to convey, to have the equitable title of those who called for a conveyance ascertained by inquiry, and to have the deed of conveyance settled by the proper officer of the court.

9. And again, where there was a voluntary settlement, and the trust property was an ascertained and undisputed fund which might have been paid into the bank without suit, but there were divers disputes as to the proper cestuis que trust, and out of such disputes several suits had sprung, to all of which the trustee was a necessary defendant; it was held that he was entitled to institute a suit to be relieved of the trouble and annoyance (q), V.-C. Malins saying: "It has been contended that it can signify nothing to a trustee whether he is discharged or not, for under the Trustee Relief Act, if he paid the money into court, he would be discharged from liability. But, in fact, the trustee is not in that way discharged from being a trustee.

(n) Re Elliott, L. R., 15 Eq. 194; Re Foligno, 32 B. 131; Re Knight, 27 B. 45; Re Woodburn, 1 D. & J. 333.

(o) Talbot v. Earl Radnor, 3 M. & K. 252.

(p) 3 Russ. 583.

(q) Barker v. Peile, 2 Dr. & S. 340.

If he brings the money into court under the act, he still remains a trustee, and though he would be under no liability quoad the fund brought in, he would not be discharged from liability quoad the past income, and, moreover, he must be served with notice of all proceedings under the act in relation to the fund, and this of necessity would compel him to incur some expense in employing a solicitor; and, moreover, it is within the range of possibility that the court might, under the powers given by the act, direct a suit to be instituted to determine the rights of the parties claiming the fund at some future time, to which he would be a necessary party, not having been discharged from being a trustee. I am of opinion that the Trustee Relief Act does not deprive the trustee of the right to come here and ask to be discharged, if the circumstances justify him in so doing, as they do here, and that he is, therefore, entitled to costs as between solicitor and client."

10. But where there is no dispute respecting the amount of a trust fund, and no justifiable ground for the trustee retiring from his office, the only doubt being as to the proper persons entitled; and the trustee, instead of paying the money into court under the Trustee Relief Act, institutes a suit for the purpose of having the rights of the cestuis que trust declared, he will be allowed such costs only as he would have been entitled to if he had paid the fund into court under the act (r).

all may be enforced against one or more only (b). But as between themselves, where all are equally guilty of a breach of trust not amounting to actual fraud (c), those who have had to refund the loss to the trust will be entitled to contribution from the others (d); and where one is more guilty than the other or others, the whole loss may be thrown upon him (e). The claim to contribution is a specialty debt (f).

ILLUST.—1. A loss was suffered by the creditors of a bankrupt through the joint default of the assignees in bankruptcy. A decree was made against them, and one of them had to make the loss good. Contribution was, however, enforced against his co-assignees, and the objection that these latter acted only for conformity was disallowed. Sir W. Grant, M. R., said: “Where entire damages are recovered against several defendants guilty of a tort, a court of justice will not interfere to enforce contribution amongst wrongdoers; but here there is nothing but the non-performance of a civil obligation. The liability is not ex delicto unless every refusal to comply with a legal obligation makes a party guilty of a delictum” (g).

2. So where a large balance was found to be due jointly from a trustee and the representatives of a deceased co-trustee, but costs were given to both out of the trust estate, it being admitted that no part of the loss could be recovered from the estate of the deceased trustee, it was held that the surviving trustee, upon paying the whole of the loss, was entitled to a lien for half of it on the costs awarded to the representatives of his deceased co-trustee (h).

3. H. W., as trustee of a marriage settlement, held a bond to secure 1,200*l*. J. W., his brother, who was a specialty creditor of the obligor, obtained possession of the obligor's assets and applied them in payment of his own debt and of simple contract debts before administration, which was afterwards granted to the obligor's widow (the sister of J. W.), who was entirely guided by his advice. Subsequently, J. W. represented to H. W. that only 600*l*. was forthcoming and available for the bond. H. W., acting on this statement, retired from the trust; and a memorandum was endorsed on the trust deed, signed by the administratrix and by the tenant for life of the trust fund, stating that 600*l*. only were available to pay the bond, and J. W. was appointed trustee of the marriage settlement in place of H. W. The assets of the obligor would have been, if properly administered, sufficient to pay the bond in full. Under these circumstances it was held that J. W. and H. W. were both liable to the full amount of the bond; but that J. W.'s assets (he having died) were primarily answerable, as he had received the trust fund (i).

ART. 67.—The Measure of the Trustee's Responsibility.

The general measure of a trustee's responsibility for a breach of trust is the amount by which the trust property has been depreciated without interest (a): Provided that—

α. Where he has actually received interest, or ought to have received interest, he will be liable to account for what he has received in the one case (b), and for what he ought to have received in the other, which is, in the absence of express direction, 4 per cent. (c);

β. Where it is so fairly to be presumed that he did receive interest, that he ought to be estopped from denying that he did actually receive it, he will be liable to pay simple interest at 4 or 5 per cent. according to the circumstances. But where he has employed the trust property in trade or speculation, he will be liable to pay interest at 5 per cent. with yearly, or even half-yearly, rests, if he may reasonably be presumed to have made that amount, or (where he has actively employed it in trade or speculation), at the option of the cestuis que trust, to account for all the profits made by him (d). The circumstances which will raise such a presumption admit of no rule, but, in general, misconduct, which has had his own benefit as the end in view, will raise it (e).

ILLUST.—1. A trustee who is guilty of unreasonable delay in investing trust funds will be answerable to the cestuis que trust for simple interest at 4 per cent. during the continuance of such delay (f).

2. A trustee who without proper authority calls in trust property invested on mortgage at 5 per cent., would be liable for that rate of interest, for although he may not actually have received that rate, he ought to have done so (g).

3. A trustee retained trust funds uninvested for several years, and mixed them with his own private monies. The Vice-Chancellor held that 5 per cent. compound interest was chargeable; but on appeal this decision was reversed, Lord of 5 per cent., which appears to me to be perfectly right, and for this reason, that the money was retained in the defendants' own hands, and was made use of by them. That being so, the court presumes the rate of interest made upon money to be the ordinary rate of interest, viz. 5 per cent. I cannot, however, think the decree correct in directing half-yearly rests, because the principle laid down in the case of The Attorney-General v. Alford appears to be the sound principle, namely, that the court does not proceed against an accounting party by way of punishing him for making use of the plaintiff's money, by directing rests, or payment of compound interest, but proceeds upon this principle, that either he has made, or has put himself into such a position that he is to be presumed to have made, 5 per cent., or compound interest, as the case may be. If the court finds it is stated in the bill, and proved, or possibly (and I guard myself on this point of the case) if it is not stated, but is admitted on the face of the answer without any statement in the bill, that the money received has been invested in an ordinary trade, the whole course of decision has tended to this, that the court presumes that the party against whom relief is sought has made that amount of profit which persons ordinarily do make in trade; and in those cases the court directs rests to be made. But how does the case stand here? . . . It must not be forgotten that a solicitor's business is not such a business as I have described; it is not one in which half-yearly or yearly rests, as the case may be, would be made in making up the account. There is nothing like compound interest obtained upon the money employed by a solicitor. On the contrary, he is out of pocket for a considerable period by those moneys which he expends, and upon which he receives no interest for possibly three or four years. It appears to me, therefore, that no case arises here in which you could say that such a profit has been made, or necessarily is to be inferred."

5. In order to charge a trustee with compound interest, or with actual profits for employing the trust funds in trade, there must be an active calling in of the trust moneys for the purpose of embarking them in the trade or speculation. In Vyse v. Foster (k) the facts were as follows:—A testator was partner in a well-established and prosperous business, under articles, by which, on the death of any partner, his share was to be taken by the surviving partners, at a price to be ascertained from the last stock-taking, and to be paid by instalments extending over two years, with interest at 5*l.* per cent. per annum from his death. He appointed three executors, one of whom was one of the partners in his business, and another some years after his death became a partner; the third never was concerned in the business. The value of the testator's share was ascertained but not paid, the amount being allowed for some years to remain in the hands of the firm, who treated it in their books as a debt, and allowed interest on it at 5*l.* per cent. per annum, with yearly rests. One of the testator's residuary legatees, upon becoming entitled to payment of her share, refused to accept payment on the above footing, and filed her bill against the executors, claiming to be entitled to a share in the profits of the business arising from the use of the testator's capital. Upon these facts, it was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to any account of profits, the mere delay by executors in calling in a debt due to the testator from a firm of which some of the executors were members, not giving his estate any right to share in the profits. Lord Justice James said: "If an executor or trustee makes a profit by an improper dealing with the assets or the trust fund, that profit he must give up to the trust. If that improper dealing consists in embarking or investing the trust money in business, he must account for the profits made by him by such employment in such business, or at the option of the cestuis que trust, or if it does not appear, or cannot be made to appear, what profits are attributable to such employment he must account for trade interest—that is to say, interest at 5 per cent. In this case the successive partnerships have charged themselves in their own accounts with interest at 5 per cent. and with annual rests, and the sum due on that footing has been paid. And the questions, therefore, are, whether the plaintiff is entitled to anything; and if anything, to what and from whom in respect of the surplus profits due to capital, and how are such surplus profits to be ascertained. In the first place, there is a clear breach of trust in not calling in the money. . . . But it is necessary to consider another aspect of the matter. . . . This court is not a court of penal jurisdiction. It compels restitution of property unconscientiously withheld; it gives full compensation for any loss or damage through failure of some equitable duty; but it has no power of punishing anyone. In fact, it is not by way of punishment that the court ever charges a trustee with more than he actually received or ought to have received and the appropriate interest thereon. It is simply on the ground that the court finds that he actually made more, constituting monies in his hands had and received to the use of the cestuis que trust (1). A trustee, for instance, lending money to his firm, is answerable for such money, with full interest, to the uttermost farthing; but to make him answerable for all the profits made of such money by all the firm would be simply a punishment. . . . Is the mere fact of the union of the three characters—debtor, executor, and trader—in the same person, sufficient to entitle the estate to an investigation into the trader's own business, because there has been some delay, or great delay, in paying off the debt? We have found no case in which this has been laid down, even in the case of a sole executor, sole debtor, sole trader.

furniture was purchased by F. for 550*l.*, and he also paid 250*l.* towards repairs. A. invested a sum to make good the principal trust fund, but refused to pay the interest which had accrued due from S. It was held, however, that he had, by his conduct, mixed the trust funds with his own, and that the interest must be paid out of the sum received by him from F. for repairs; the Vice-Chancellor Stuart saying, "It is a well-established doctrine in this court, that if a trustee or agent mixes and confuses the property which he holds in a fiduciary character with his own property, so as that they cannot be separated with perfect accuracy, he is liable for the whole. In this case, it is impossible to say how much of the 250*l.* received by the defendant Addison from Fowler for repairs consisted of what was due under the covenant to repair in the under-lease. The consequence is, that the whole 250*l.* is liable to the demands of the cestuis que trust, so far as necessary to make up, with the other sums admitted to be part of the trust property, the full amount of the trust fund of 520*l.*, with interest at five per cent. per annum."

ART. 69.—Property acquired by a Trustee out of Trust Funds becomes Trust Property.

If a trustee has disposed of the trust property, and the money or other property which he has received or acquired out of the proceeds can be traced in his hands, or in those of his representatives, such property will be liable to the cestuis que trust, and will be burdened with the same trusts as the original trust property (a).

for the purpose of purchasing stock, and he invests it in unauthorized stock, and absconds, the stock which he has purchased will belong to the principal, and not to the broker's assignee in bankruptcy. For a broker is a constructive trustee for his principal, and, as was said by Lord Ellenborough, "the property of a principal entrusted by him to his factor for any special purpose, belongs to the principal notwithstanding any change which that property may have undergone in form, so long as such property is capable of being identified and distinguished from all other property" (b).

2. Trustees had power, with the consent of the tenant for life, to sell the trust property, and they were directed to invest the purchase-money in the purchase of other real estate, to be settled on the like trusts. The trust property was sold under this power for 8,440*l.*, and the tenant for life was allowed (wrongly) to keep the purchase-money. About the same time he purchased another estate for 17,400*l.*, of which sum 8,124*l.* was part of the above-mentioned trust money. This estate was conveyed to him in fee simple. The tenant for life eventually became bankrupt, and it was held, that as against his assignees in bankruptcy, the original trustees of the settlement had a lien on the estate which he had purchased, to the extent of the moneys invested in its purchase (c).

3. So, in Hopper v. Conyers (d), a solicitor having in his possession the title deeds of an estate mortgaged to his client, deposited them with his own banker to secure an advance, which he applied in the purchase of an estate on his own behalf. When the mortgage to his client was paid off, he applied the money in repaying the loan from his banker, and informed his client that he had re-invested the mortgage money upon other good security, and his client thereupon executed a re-assignment of the mortgaged property. In fact the solicitor never re-invested the money upon other good security, although he continued to pay interest upon it until his death. Upon the true state of the transaction being discovered, the court held, that the client was entitled to a lien upon the estate purchased by the solicitor.

4. W. having entrusted P., his solicitor, with a sum of 7,700*l.* for investment on mortgage on his behalf, was informed by P.'s clerk, in conversation, that P. proposed to invest the money on mortgage of leasehold property at Camden Town at 5 per cent.; and subsequently received a letter from P., stating that "the money was put on 5 per cent. mortgage, as arranged by my clerk with you." On P.'s death, it was found that no mortgage existed in favour of W., but that P. had advanced 100,000*l.* to a firm of builders, on a mortgage of their leasehold property at Camden Town. It was held that P., and those claiming under him, were bound by the representation made by him, and were estopped from denying that the 7,700*l.* formed part of the 100,000*l.* so invested (e).

ART. 70.—No Set-off allowed to the Trustee where Breaches are distinct.

A trustee is only liable for the actual loss in each distinct and complete transaction which amounts to a breach of trust, and not for the loss in each particular item of it (a); but a loss in one transaction or fund is not compensated by a gain in another and distinct one (b).

Eventually part of the money was invested in consols, at a far lower rate than it would have been if invested according to the directions in the will. The trustees claimed to set-off the gain against the loss, but were not allowed to do so; because "at whatever period the unauthorized security was realized, the estate was entitled to the whole of the consols that were then bought, and if it was sold at a later period than it ought to have been, the executor was not entitled to any accidental advantage thence accruing(e). This case is at first sight difficult to be distinguished from Vyse v. Foster, but it will be perceived that the loss and gain resulted from two distinct transactions. The loss resulted from a breach of trust in not realizing the securities; the gain arose from a particular kind of stock being at a lower market value than usual at the date at which the trustees bought it.

4. Where, however, trustees committed a breach of trust in lending trust moneys on mortgage, and upon a suit by them the mortgaged property was sold and the money paid into court and invested in consols pending the suit, and the consols rose in value, the trustees were allowed to set-off the gain in the value of the consols against the loss under the mortgage, for the gain and loss arose out of one transaction(f). It is, however, very difficult to reconcile this case with the last one, but it seems to be reasonable and in accordance with common sense.

ART. 71.—Cestuis que trust may compel Performance of Duty or prevent Commission of Breach of Trust.

by, the trustees, or where the latter are residing out of the jurisdiction of the court (c), an injunction will be granted at the instance of any person with an existing, vested or contingent interest (d), either compelling the trustees to do their duty (e), or restraining them from interfering with the trust property (f), as the case may require; and if expedient a receiver will be appointed (g).

ILLUST.—1. Thus, if one commits some trespass upon lands in the possession of the trustee, and the latter refuses to sue him, the court will oblige him to lend his name for that purpose, on receiving a proper indemnity from the cestuis que trust (h).

2. And so if a tenant for life refuses to renew leaseholds, the court will compel him to do so, and a receiver of the income of the trust property will be appointed to collect sufficient to pay the renewal fine (i).

3. In Earl Talbot v. Scott (k), lands were vested in trustees by act of parliament, upon trust for sale, and subject thereto, upon trusts inalienably annexing the rents to the Earldom of Shrewsbury. The Earl of Shrewsbury attempted to disentail (which of course he could not do effectually), and devised the lands to the same trustees, upon trust for a particular claimant of the title. The trustees accepted this trust, and claimed to receive the rents in that character, pending proceedings by the plaintiff to establish his claim to the earldom. A receiver of the rents was however appointed on his application, upon the ground that the trusts of the will were in conflict with the prior trusts upon which they held the estate.

4. So in Evans v. Coventry (l), a bill was filed by a plaintiff insured in a society whose funds were liable to pay the insurance money, on behalf of himself and other persons so insured, charging a loss of the funds through the negligence of the directors. The answers and affidavits showed that the secretary had absconded with part of the funds, and that some of the directors were in needy circumstances, and the court granted an injunction restraining the directors from touching the funds, and appointed a receiver of them. Lord Justice Knight Bruce saying, "The application before the court is founded on the common right of persons who are interested in property which is in danger to apply for its protection. . . . In my judgment the objections which have been urged against this application might be urged with as much reason, as much force, and as much effect, if this were an application to restrain the felling of timber in a case of waste, partly perpetrated and partly imminent."

5. On similar grounds the court will appoint a receiver and grant an injunction where from the character or condition of the trustee he is not a fit person to have the control of the trust property; as, for instance, where he is insolvent (m), or about to become a bankrupt (n), or is a person of dissolute habits, or dishonest (o).

6. Again, the court will grant an injunction to restrain a sale by trustees at an under value (p), although this was at one time doubted (q).

SUB-DIVISION II.

LIABILITY OF PARTIES OTHER THAN THE TRUSTEES.

ART. 73.—Liability of Cestui que trust who is Party to a Breach of Trust.

WHERE one of several cestuis que trust has joined in a breach of trust, his whole equitable interest under the settlement (a) (except where he also has the legal estate (b)) may be stopped by his co-cestuis que trust as against him and all persons claiming under him, except purchasers for value without notice (c), until the whole loss has been so compensated: Provided that this article does not apply where the guilty cestui que trust is a feme covert without power of anticipation (d).

ILLUST.—1. A trustee in breach of trust lent the trust fund to A. B., the tenant for life. The trustee afterwards concurred in a creditors' deed, by which A. B.'s life interest was to be applied in payment of his debts, and the trustee received thereunder a debt due to him from A. B. Before the other creditors had been paid, the trustee retained the life income to make good the breach of trust. It was held, upon a bill filed by those claiming under the creditors' deed, that the court would not restrain the trustee from making good the breach of trust out of the life income, for although the trustee, being a creditor and party to the deed, had, quâ himself, no right to retain the life interest, yet, as representing the cestuis que trust, he was justified in doing so. And the Master of the Rolls said: "This bill, proposing to leave nothing but the personal liability of Knight (the trustee) for the reparation of the breach of trust, seeks to withdraw the liability of the life estate, and thus materially diminish the security of the cestuis que trust. . . . I cannot reconcile myself to the notion, that this is a course which this court could pursue" (e).

2. In Woodyatt v. Gresley (f), the facts were as follows. On the marriage of Sir N. and Lady Gresley two settlements were executed: by one, a sum of stock and estates in W. (the lady's property) were conveyed to trustees in trust for her for life, with remainder in trust for the children of the marriage; and by the other, Sir N. granted out of his estates a rent-charge to Lady G. for life. She, after her husband's death, fraudulently obtained a transfer of the stock, and sold it out; and afterwards she assigned her life interest in the estates in W. and the rent-charge to A. for valuable consideration, but with notice of the fraud. It was held, that the rents of the estates in W. and the rent-charge were liable to be applied to replace the stock, and a receiver of them was appointed for that purpose.

3. But where a testator devised certain real estate for life to one of his executors and trustees, and the devisee afterwards committed a breach of trust and filed his petition for liquidation, it was held, that as against the trustee in liquidation the other cestuis que trust had no lien on the interest of the trustee, the Lord Justice James saying, "The estate of a legal devisee is, under no circumstances, under the control of the court" (g).

ART. 74.—Liability of Third Parties privy to a fraudulent Breach of Trust.

All persons who are parties to a fraudulent breach of trust render themselves equally liable with the trustees, and the Statute of Limitations will not run in their favour until the fraud is known to the persons affected by it (a).

ILLUST.—1. A testator bequeathed a sum of 600*l.*, which he described as being in the hands of one Gregory (to whom he had lent the same on the security of his note of hand), to his son-in-law Rolfe, upon trust to invest the same and pay the dividends and interest to his daughter, the wife of Rolfe, for life, for her separate use; and after her death, upon trust for Rolfe for life, with remainder to their children. On the death of the testator, Rolfe the trustee became indebted to Gregory, and in order to discharge part of that debt he delivered to Gregory the note of hand for 600*l.* It was held that as Gregory had information of the manner of the bequest he was a party to the fraudulent abstraction of the trust property, and liable to refund the amount, and that being founded on fraud the Statute of Limitations did not apply (b).

2. So where a fund was standing to the account of two trustees in the books of some bankers, who had notice that it was a trust fund, and by the direction of the tenant for life only they transferred it to his account, and thereby obtained payment of a debt due from him to them. It was held that the trustees might sue the bankers to have the trust fund replaced, and that the Statute of Limitations was not applicable (c).

three trustees, executed an assignment of leasehold property, held by them jointly, to a purchaser, and forged the signatures of his two co-trustees, and also the requisite assent of his cestui que trust to the sale. A. was a solicitor, and acted as such for the purchaser. It was held, that in accordance with the maxim Qui facit per alium, facit per se, the purchaser had constructive notice by his solicitor of the existence of the trust, and that although the execution by one of three joint tenants was a valid assignment of the legal interest in one-third of the property to the purchaser, yet the constructive notice of the trust disentitled him from taking any beneficial interest.

2. So where there is a lien for unpaid purchase-money (which, as we have seen, burdens the estate with a trust pro tanto), a subsequent purchaser, with notice of the lien (such, for instance, as that which is constructively afforded by the absence of an indorsed receipt on the conveyance (h)), will take the estate subject to it (i).

3. If an alienee is a volunteer, then the estate will remain burdened with the trust, whether he had notice of the trust (k) or not (l); for a volunteer has no equity as against a true owner.

4. But where one purchased lands from a devisee of them bonâ fide, and without notice of any defect in the will, and afterwards the heir of the testator filed a bill, alleging that the testator had revoked his will, it was held that the purchaser was entitled, whether the will was revoked or not (m).

5. In Thorndike v. Hunt (n), a trustee of two different settlements having applied to his own use funds subject to one of the settlements, replaced them by funds which, under a power of attorney from his co-trustee under the other, he transferred into the names of himself and his co-trustee in the former. In a suit in respect of breaches of trust of the former settlement, the trustees of it transferred the fund thus replaced into court, and it was held by the Court of Appeal, that the transfer into court was equivalent to an alienation for value without notice, and that the cestuis que trust under the other settlement could not follow the trust fund.

6. The trustees of a settlement advanced the trust money on the security of real property which was conveyed to them by the mortgagor, the mortgage deed noticing the trust. The surviving trustee of the settlement afterwards reconveyed part of the property to the mortgagor on payment of part of the mortgage money, which he forthwith appropriated. The mortgagor then conveyed that part of the property to new mortgagees, concealing, with the connivance of the trustee, both the prior mortgage and the reconveyance. When the fraud was discovered the cestui que trust under the settlement filed a bill against the new mortgagees, claiming priority; but the court refused to interfere, Lord Justice James saying, "I propose to apply myself to the case of a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice, obtaining on the occasion of his purchase, and by means of his purchase deed, some legal estate, some legal right, some legal advantage; and according to my view of the established law of this court, such a purchaser's plea of a purchase for valuable consideration without notice, is an absolute, unqualified, unanswerable plea to the jurisdiction of this court. . . . In such a case a purchaser is entitled to hold that which, without breach of duty, he has had conveyed to him"(o).

7. It would seem that a bonâ fide purchaser for value would not be bound by notice of a very doubtful equity; for instance, where the construction of a trust is ambiguous or equivocal (p); but where he is ignorant of any well-understood doctrine of equity, such, for instance, as that relating to the separate estate of married women (q), he will not be excused.

8. A purchaser with notice from a purchaser without notice is safe; for if not, an innocent purchaser for value would be incapable of ever alienating the property which he had acquired without breach of duty, and such a restraint on alienation would necessarily create that stagnation against which the law has always set its face (r).

9. Where a trustee, holding a mortgage, deposits the deeds with another to secure an advance to himself, the lender will have no equity against the cestuis que trust, however bonâ fide he may have acted, and however free he may have been of notice of the trustee's fraud, for he has not got the legal estate, and therefore his equity, being no stronger than that of the cestuis que trust, the maxim Qui prior in tempore, potior in jure est applies (s).

10. It is upon this principle that choses in action are generally taken, subject to all equities affecting them. Thus in Turton v. Benson (t), a son on his marriage was to have from his mother, as a portion, a sum equal to that with which his intended father-in-law should endow the intended wife. The son, in order to induce the mother to give him a larger portion, entered into a collusive arrangement with the father-in-law, whereby, in consideration of the latter nominally endowing his daughter with 3,000*l.*, the son gave him a bond to repay him 1,000*l.*, part of it. This bond, being made upon a fraudulent consideration, was void in the hands of the father-in-law, and it was held, trusts (c), or being simple trusts it is gathered from the settlement that the settlor contemplated the possibility of any of the cestuis que trust being under disability at the date of the sale or payment (d), or in any other case where an intention to impose the duty on the purchaser or person paying cannot reasonably be inferred (e).

ILLUST.—1. Sub-article 7 is the only part of the foregoing article which requires illustration. Where the trust is for payment of general debts either alone or in priority to specified debts or legacies, the purchaser is discharged from seeing to the application of the purchase-money; because the trustee has to ascertain and test the validity of all debts which may be alleged to be due, and therefore the trusts of the purchase-money are not simple trusts (f); and a simple exemption holds where the purchase-money is to be applied in the purchase of other lands (g), or on other special trusts. But where the trusts of the purchase-money are to pay certain specified debts or specified legacies, so that the parties entitled are clearly ascertained by the settlement, and if there is no other evidence of the intention of the settlor to exempt the purchaser from seeing to the application of the purchase-money, he will be bound to do so. For in equity the cestuis que trust are the absolute owners, and the trustee is a mere instrument or agent, and therefore the cestuis que trust are the persons to receive the purchase-money, and to give a valid receipt for it (h). It is, however, humbly conceived that if the doctrine that a power to give valid discharges is to be implied where the trustee has some unascertained duty to perform with the purchase-money before paying it over to the cestuis que trust were carried to its logical conclusion, it would apply to cases in which the purchase-money is to be distributed among specified persons; but the trustee is directed to first pay thereout all expenses of the sale. For it does not seem reasonable to suppose that the settlor intended to impose on the purchaser the duty of ascertaining that the costs deducted were properly incurred at all, or if properly incurred were properly taxed before payment. It is difficult to see wherein such a case differs from a general charge of debts, inasmuch as the ascertainment of the expenses of the sale would require quite as much circumspection and trouble on the part of the purchaser as an investigation into the settlor's general debts. However, I am not aware that the doctrine has ever been pushed to this extent; and it is not considered very probable that the court would do so now.

2. Where the trust was to pay certain specified sums and then to invest the residue, it was held that the purchaser was bound to see to the payment of the specified sums.

3. But where a testator devised certain land unto his children, "the same to be sold when the executors and trustees of this my last will shall see proper to dispose of it, and the money arising out of my said lands and tenements to be equally and severally divided among my above named children," some of whom were infants, it was held that the trustees could give valid receipts, the Vice-Chancellor saying: "It is plain the testator intended that the trustees should have an immediate power of sale. Some of the children were infants, and not capable of signing receipts. I must, therefore, infer that the testator meant to give to the trustees the power to sign receipts, being an authority necessary for the execution of his declared purpose" (i).

4. On the other hand, where the intention on the part of the testator cannot be implied, as for instance, where he contemplates that all the cestuis que trust will be sui juris at the date of sale, but in fact one or more of them labour under some disability (as, for instance, if one dies and his representative is an infant) at that date, the purchaser will have to see to the application of the purchase-money; for the rule of law depends upon construction or intention, and not convenience (k).

5. As the rule depends upon implied intention, an implied power to give valid discharges is not taken away by the fact that, at the actual date of sale, the status of the parties interested is such as would have rebutted the presumption had the settlor had such status in his contemplation at the date of the settlement (l). For instance, where a testator devises property to trustees upon trust to sell and pay debts generally, and subject thereto upon trust for A. B., the non-existence of debts at the time of sale is, in general, immaterial; for the testator contemplated that there would be some, and therefore intended to give the trustees power to give valid discharges (m). But if the sole object of the trust was to pay debts, and the purchaser knew that there were none, or that they had been paid, he will of course not be justified in paying the purchase-money to the trustee, for the sale would in such case be itself a breach of trust, and the purchaser taking with notice would of course be responsible under Article 75 (n).

6. It may here be mentioned that on similar principles where there is a charge of debts and a power of sale in the event of the personal estate proving deficient, the purchaser need not concern himself to ascertain whether there is a deficiency in the personal estate (o).

POWELL ON EVIDENCE. By CUTLER & GRIFFIN.
—Fourth Edition.

POWELL'S PRINCIPLES and PRACTICE of the LAW of EVIDENCE. Fourth Edition. By J. CUTLER, B.A., Professor of English Law and Jurisprudence, and Professor of Indian Jurisprudence at King's College, London, and E. F. GRIFFIN, B.A., Barristers-at-Law. Post 8vo. 18s. cloth. 1875

"There is hardly any branch of the law of greater interest and importance, not only to the profession, but to the public at large, than the law of evidence. On this branch of the law, moreover, all well as on many others, important changes have been effected of recent years. We are, therefore, all the more inclined to welcome the appearance of the Fourth Edition of this valuable work."—Law Examination Journal.

DENISON AND SCOTT'S HOUSE OF LORDS APPEAL PRACTICE.

APPEALS TO THE HOUSE OF LORDS: Procedure and Practice relative to English, Scotch and Irish Appeals; with the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876; the Standing Orders of the House; Directions to Agents; Forms, and Tables of Costs. Edited, with Notes, References and a full Index, forming a complete Book of Practice under the New Appellate System. By CHAS. MARSH DENISON and CHAS. HENDERSON SCOTT, of the Middle Temple, Esqs., Barristers-at-Law. 8vo. 16s. cloth. 1879

"The most important portion of the work, viz., that concerning the Procedure and Practice on Appeal to the House of Lords, contains information of the most important kind to those gentlemen who have business of this nature; it is well and ably compiled, and the practitioner will find no difficulty in following the various steps indicated.

"The whole book is well and carefully prepared, and is unusually readable in its style."—Justice of the Peace.

"This is a small volume upon a subject of the greatest practical interest at the present time, for, notwithstanding the changes which have been made in the construction of the ultimate Court of Appeal, there are no two opinions as to the position which it holds in the confidence of the profession and the public. A learned introduction gives a brief but sufficient historical sketch of the jurisdiction of the House of Lords. This is followed by a practical treatise, which is a complete and well-written guide to the procedure by which an Appeal is begun, continued, and ended, including an important chapter on Costs. In an Appendix are given the Act of 1876, the portions of the Supreme Court of Judicature (Ireland) Act, 1877, and the Scotch Statutes, Forms, and Bills of Costs."—Law Times.

Post 8vo. 9s. cloth. 1876

"Mr. Drewry's plan of taking the facts for the forms from reported cases and adapting them to the new rules of pleading, seems the best that can be adopted. The forms we have looked at seem to be fairly correct."—Solicitors' Journal.

"The equity draftsmen of the present day, who, however experienced in the niceties of the past system, cannot but need the aid of a work thus compiled, and, trusting to its guidance, benefit in time and labour saved; while to the younger members of the profession especially we cordially recommend the work."—Irish Law Times.

FAWCETT'S LAW OF LANDLORD AND TENANT.

A COMPENDIUM OF THE LAW OF LANDLORD AND TENANT. By WILLIAM MITCHELL FAWCETT, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. 1 vol. 8vo. 14s. cloth. 1871

"This new compendium of the law on a wide and complicated subject, upon which information is constantly required by a vast number of persons, is sure to be in request. It never wanders from the point, and being intended not for students of the law, but for lessors and lessees, and their immediate advisers, wisely avoids historical disquisitions, and uses language as untechnical as the subject admits."—Law Journal.

"Mr. Fawcett takes advantage of this characteristic of modern law to impart to his compendium a degree of authenticity which greatly enhances its value as a convenient medium of reference, for he has stated the law in the very words of the authorities."—Law Magazine.

HUNT'S LAW OF FRAUDS AND BILLS OF SALE.

THE LAW relating to FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES under the Statutes of Elizabeth and the Bankrupt Acts; with Remarks on the Law relating to Bills of Sale. By ARTHUR JOSEPH HUNT, of the Inner Temple, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Author of "A Treatise on the Law relating to Boundaries, Fences and Foreshores." Post 8vo. 9s. cloth. 1872

"Mr. Hunt has brought to bear upon the subject a clearness of statement, an orderliness of arrangement and a subtlety of logical acuteness which carry him far towards a complete systematization of all the cases. Neither has his industry been lacking; the cases that have arisen under 'The Bankruptcy Act, 1869,' and under the Bills of Sale Act, have been carefully and completely noted up and disposed by him in their appropriate places. The index also is both accurate and careful, and secures much facility of reference to the various matters which are the subjects of the work."—Law Magazine.

"Mr. Hunt's book is as readable as a treatise on so technical a subject can well be made. Mr. Hunt's arrangement of his materials follows an orderly and intelligible plan. The index is apparently carefully prepared, and the table of cases shows that none of the recent cases have been overlooked. Mr. Hunt has produced a really useful book unencumbered by useless matter, which deserves great success as a manual of the law of fraudulent dispositions of property."—Law Journal.

COOTE'S PROBATE PRACTICE.—Ninth Edition.

THE COMMON FORM PRACTICE OF THE HIGH COURT of JUSTICE in granting Probates and Administrations. By HENRY CHARLES COOTE, F.S.A., late Proctor in Doctors' Commons, Author of "The Practice of the Ecclesiastical Courts," &c. &c. 9th Edit. In 1 vol. 8vo., 26s. cloth; 30s. calf. 1883

* * * The Forms as printed in this work are in strict accordance with the Orders of Court and Decisions of the Right Hon. Sir James Hannen, and are those which are in use in the Principal Registry of the Probate Divisional Court.

"The above is another name for what is commonly known to the profession as Coote's Probate Practice, a work about as indispensable in a solicitor's office as any book of practice that is known to us. The seventh edition is chiefly distinguishable from the sixth edition in this, that certain important modifications and alterations are effected which have been rendered necessary by the Judicature Acts. Judicial decisions subsequent to the last edition have been carefully noted up. We notice several new and useful forms; and the author has not only attempted, but has in the main succeeded, in adopting the forms and directions under the old Probate practice, as embodied in previous editions of the work, to the new procedure under the Judicature Acts. Solicitors know that the difficulties in the way of satisfying the different clerks at Somerset House are frequently great, and there is nothing so likely to tend to simplicity of practice as Mr. Coote's book."—Law Times.

CUNNINGHAM GLEN, Barrister-at-Law, Author of the "Law of Highways," "Law of Public Health and Local Government," &c. 2 vols. royal 8vo. 63s. cloth; 75s. calf. 1869

"The work must take its unquestionable position as the leading Manual of the Railway Law of Great Britain."—Law Magazine.

"At any rate we may venture to predict that Mr. Cunningham Glen's edition of Shelford on Railways will be the standard work of our day in that department of law."—Law Journal.

"Far be it from us to under value Mr. Shelford's labours, or to disparage his merits. But we may nevertheless be permitted to observe that what has hitherto been considered as 'the best work on the subject' (Shelford), has been immeasurably improved by the application of Mr. Glen's diligence and learning. . . . Sufficient, however, has been done to show that it is in every respect worthy of the reputation which the work has always enjoyed."—Justice of the Peace.

GRANT'S BANKERS AND BANKING COMPANIES.
Fourth Edition. By C. C. M. PLUMPTRE.

GRANT'S TREATISE ON THE LAW RELATING TO BANKERS AND BANKING COMPANIES. With an Appendix of the most important Statutes in force relating thereto. Fourth Edition. With Supplement, containing the Bills of Exchange and Bills of Sale Acts, 1882. By C. C. M. PLUMPTRE, of the Middle Temple, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. 8vo. 29s. cloth.

* * * The Supplement may be had separately, price 3s. sewed.

"Eight years sufficed to exhaust the second edition of this valuable and standard work, we need only now notice the improvements which have been made. We have once more looked through the work, and recognize in it the sterling merits which have acquired for it the high position which it holds in standard legal literature. Mr. Fisher has annotated all the recent cases."—Law Times.

FISHER'S LAW OF MORTGAGE—Fourth Edition.

The LAW of MORTGAGE and OTHER SECURITIES UPON PROPERTY. By WILLIAM RICHARD FISHER, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Fourth Edition. 1 vol. roy. 8vo. [In the Press

"This work has built up for itself, in the experienced opinion of the profession, a very high reputation for carefulness, accuracy and lucidity. This reputation is fully maintained in the present edition. The law of securities upon property is confessedly intricate, and, probably, as the author justly observes, embraces a greater variety of learning than any other single branch of the English law. At the same time, an accurate knowledge of it is essential to every practising barrister, and of daily requirement amongst solicitors. To all such we can confidently recommend Mr. Fisher's work, which will, moreover, prove most useful reading for the student, both as a storehouse of information and as intellectual exercise."—Law Magazine.

"We have received the third edition of the Law of Mortgage, by William Richard Fisher, Barrister-at-Law, and we are very glad to find that vast improvements have been made in the plan of the work, which is due to the incorporation therein of what Mr. Fisher designed and executed for the abortive Digest Commission. In its present form, embracing as it does all the statute and case law to the present time, the work is one of great value."—Law Times.

LEWIS'S INTRODUCTION TO CONVEYANCING.

PRINCIPLES OF CONVEYANCING EXPLAINED and ILLUSTRATED by CONCISE PRECEDENTS. With an Appendix on the Effect of the Transfer of Land Act in Modifying and Shortening Conveyances. By HUBERT LEWIS, B.A., late Scholar of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 8vo. 18s. cloth. 1863

"By the diligent and painstaking student who has duly mastered the law of property, this work will undoubtedly be hailed as a very comprehensive exponent of the Principles of Conveyancing."—Leguleian, or Articled Clerks' Magazine.

"Mr. Lewis has contributed a valuable aid to the law student. He has condensed the Practice of Conveyancing into a shape that will facilitate its retention on the memory, and his Precedents are usefully arranged as a series of progressive lessons, which may be either used as illustrations or exercises." Law Times.

PHILLIMORE'S INTERNATIONAL LAW.—3rd edit.

Vol. I. 8vo. 24s. cloth; Vol. II. 26s. cloth.

COMMENTARIES ON INTERNATIONAL LAW.

By the Right Hon. Sir ROBERT PHILLIMORE, Knt., P.C., Judge in the Probate, Matrimonial, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice. 1879

* * Vol. III., second edition (1875), price 36s.; Vol. IV., second edition (1874), price 34s. cloth, may be had separately to complete sets.

Extract from Pamphlet on "American Neutrality," by GEORGE BEMIS (Boston, U.S.).—"Sir Robert Phillimore, the present Queen's Advocate, and author of the most comprehensive and systematic 'Commentaries on International Law' that England has produced."

"The authority of this work is admittedly great, and the learning and ability displayed in its preparation have been recognized by writers on public law both on the Continent of Europe and in the United States. With this necessarily imperfect sketch we must conclude our notice of the first volume of a work which forms an important contribution to the literature of public law. The book is of great utility, and one which should find a place in the library of every civilian."—Law Magazine.

"It is the most complete repository of matters bearing upon international law that we have in the language. We need not repeat the commendations of the text itself as a treatise or series of treatises which this journal expressed upon the appearance of the two first volumes. The reputation of the Author is too well established and too widely known. We content ourselves with testifying to the fulness and thoroughness of the work as a compilation after an inspection of the three volumes. (2nd edition)."—Boston (United States) Daily Advertiser.

"Sir Robert Phillimore may well be proud of this work as a lasting record of his ability, learning and his industry.

Having read the work carefully and critically, we are able to highly recommend it."—Law Journal.

"The second edition of Sir Robert Phillimore's Commentaries contains a considerable amount of valuable additional matter, bearing more especially on questions of international law raised by the wars and contentions that have broken out in the world since the publication of the first edition. Having upon a former occasion discussed at some length the general principles and execution of this important work, we now propose to confine ourselves to a brief examination of a single question, on which Sir Robert Phillimore may justly be regarded as the latest authority and as the champion of the principles of maritime law, which, down to a recent period, were maintained by this country, and which were at one time accepted without question by the maritime powers. Sir Robert Phillimore has examined with his usual learning, and established without the possibility of doubt, the history of the doctrine 'free ships, free goods,' and its opposite, in the third volume of his 'Commentaries' (p. 302)."—Edinburgh Review, No. 296, October, 1876.

UNDERHILL'S SETTLED LAND ACT, 1882.

THE SETTLED LAND ACT, 1882; with an Introduction and Notes, and Concise Precedents of Conveyancing and Chancery Documents required under the Act. By ARTHUR UNDERHILL, M.A., LL.D., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, Author of "A Concise Treatise on Private Trusts," "A Manual of Chancery Procedure," &c. Assisted by RALPH HAWTREY DEANE, B.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. Post 8vo. 8s. cloth. 1882

UNDERHILL'S CHANCERY PROCEDURE.

A PRACTICAL and CONCISE MANUAL of the PROCEDURE of the CHANCERY DIVISION of the HIGH COURT of JUSTICE, both in Actions and Matters. By ARTHUR UNDERHILL, LL.D., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. 1 vol. post 8vo., 10s. 6d. cloth. 1881

"We would advise its perusal by all students and young practitioners."—Justice of the Peace.

"Mr. Underhill has produced within small compass a very useful work on Chancery Practice."—Law Students' Journal.

"This most excellent treatise on Chancery Practice supplies a long existing want. Within a comparatively small space Mr. Underhill, in his usual clear, emphatic and intelligent manner, has supplied the student with all the necessary information respecting the peculiar practice in the Chancery Division. The work cannot fail to be of great service to the student, especially if he aspires for Honors, and he will find it a complete work to his purpose, while to the practitioner such accurate information as is conveyed in its pages can hardly fail to be of service; and, like its companions, the now well-known 'Underhill's Torts,' and 'Underhill's Trustees,' the volume will meet with a ready sale."—Gibson's Final.

UNDERHILL'S LAW OF TORTS.—Third Edition.

A SUMMARY OF THE LAW OF TORTS, OR WRONGS INDEPENDENT OF CONTRACT, including the Employers' Liability Act, 1880. By ARTHUR UNDERHILL, LL.D., of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister-at-Law; assisted by C. C. M. PLUMPTRE, of the Middle Temple, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Third Edition. Post 8vo. 8s. cloth. 1881

"He has set forth the elements of the law with clearness and accuracy. The little work of Mr. Underhill is inexpensive and may be relied on."—Law Times.

"The plan is a good one and has been honestly carried out, and a good index facilitates reference to the contents of the book."—Justice of the Peace.

UNDERHILL'S LAW OF TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

A CONCISE MANUAL OF THE LAW RELATING TO PRIVATE TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES. By ARTHUR UNDERHILL, M.A., of Lincoln's Inn and the Chancery Bar, Barrister-at-Law. Post 8vo. 8s. cloth. 1878

"The author so treats his subjects that it will not be found a difficult matter for a person of ordinary intelligence to retain the matter therein contained, which must be constantly necessary, not only to the professional man, but also for all those who may have taken upon themselves the responsibilities of a trustee."—Justice of the Peace.

"We recently published a short review or notice of Mr. A. F. Leach's 'Digest of the Law of Probate Duty,' and remarked that it was framed after the model of Sir Fitzjames Stephen's 'Digest of the Criminal Law and Law of Evidence from the Indian Acts,' and which has been followed by Mr. Pollock in his 'Digest of the Law of Partnership.' Mr. Underhill has, in the above-named volume, performed a similar task in relation to the 'Law of Trusts.' In seventy-six articles he has summarized the principles of the 'Law of Trusts' as distinctly and accurately as the subject will admit, and has supplemented the articles with illustrations." Law Journal.

SCRIVEN ON COPYHOLDS.—6th Edit., by Brown.

By JOHN SCRIVEN. The Sixth Edition, thoroughly revised, re-arranged, and brought down to the present time, by ARCHIBALD BROWN, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, B.C.L., &c., Editor of "Bainbridge on the Law of Mines." 1 vol. roy. 8vo. 30s. cloth. 1882

BAINBRIDGE ON MINES.—4th Edit., by Archibald Brown.

A TREATISE on the LAW of MINES and MINERALS. By WILLIAM BAINBRIDGE, Esq., F.G.S., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Fourth Edition. By ARCHIBALD BROWN, M.A. Edin. and Oxon, of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. This Work has been wholly re-cast, and in the greater part re-written. It contains, also, several chapters of entirely new matter, which have obtained at the present day great Mining importance. 8vo. 45s. cloth. 1878

"This work must be already familiar to all readers whose practice brings them in any manner in connection with mines or mining, and they well know its value. We can only say of this new edition that it is in all respects worthy of its predecessors."—Law Times on 3rd edit.

"It would be entirely superfluous to attempt a general review of a work which has for so long a period occupied the position of the standard work on this important subject. Those only who, by the nature of their practice, have learned to lean upon Mr. Bainbridge as on a solid staff, can appreciate the deep research, the admirable method, and the graceful style of this model treatise."—Law Journal on 3rd edit.

THE INSTITUTES OF ENGLISH LAW.—Part 1, English Public Law. Part 2, English Private Law (in 2 vols.). Part 3, Evidence and the Measure of Damages. "Mr. Nasmith has evidently expended much labour and care in the compilation and arrangement of the present work, and so far as we have been able to test it, the bulk of his Treatise, which is confined to a concise exposition of the existing law, appears to merit the praise of accuracy and clearness."—Law Magazine.

"This book cannot be too strongly recommended to every one who contemplates becoming a solicitor."—Law Examination Journal.

"Mr. E. H. Bedford, indefatigable in his labours on behalf of the articulated clerk, has supervised a new edition of Mosely's Handy Book of Elementary Law. It will certainly not be the fault of either author or editor if the years spent under articles are not well spent, and if the work required to lay a sound foundation of legal knowledge is not done with that 'knowledge' of which they so emphatically declare the necessity."—Law Magazine.

ORTOLAN'S ROMAN LAW, Translated by PRICHARD and NASMITH.

THE HISTORY OF ROMAN LAW, from the Text of Ortolan's Histoire de la Législation Romaine et Généralisation du Droit (edition of 1870). Translated, with the Author's permission, and Supplemented by a Chronometrical Chart of Roman History. By I. T. PRICHARD, Esq., F.S.S., and DAVID NASMITH, Esq., LL.D., Barristers-at-Law. 8vo. 28s. cloth. 1871 translation before us, it is enough to say, that it is a faithful representation of the original."—Law Magazine.

KELLY'S CONVEYANCING DRAFTSMAN.—2nd Edit.

THE DRAFTSMAN: containing a Collection of Concise Precedents and Forms in Conveyancing; with Introductory Observations and Practical Notes. By JAMES H. KELLY. Second Edition. Post 8vo. 12s. 6d. cloth. 1881

"Mr. Kelly's object is to give a few precedents of each of those instruments which are most commonly required in a solicitor's office, and for which precedents are not always to be met with in the ordinary books on conveyancing. The idea is a good one, and the precedents contained in the book are, generally speaking, of the character contemplated by the author's design. We have been favourably impressed with a perusal of several of the precedents in this book, and practitioners who have already adopted forms of their own will probably find it advantageous to collate them with those given by Mr. Kelly. Each set of precedents is prefaced by a few terse and practical observations."—Solicitors' Journal.

"Such statements of law and facts as are contained in the work are accurate."—Law Journal.

"It contains matter not found in the more ambitious works on conveyancing, and we venture to think that the student will find it a useful supplement to his reading on the subject of conveyancing."—Law Examination Journal.

REDMAN ON ARBITRATIONS AND AWARDS.

A CONCISE TREATISE on the LAW OF ARBITRATIONS and AWARDS; with an Appendix of Precedents and Statutes. By JOSEPH HAWORTH REDMAN, of the Middle Temple, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Author of "A Treatise on the Law of Railway Companies as Carriers." 8vo. 12s. cloth. 1872

"The arrangement is good, the style clear, and the work exhaustive. There is a useful appendix of precedents and statutes, and a very good index."—Law Times.

"This is likely to prove a useful book in practice. All the ordinary law on the subject is given shortly and in a convenient and accessible form, and the index is a good one."—Solicitors' Journal.

"We have no doubt but that the work will be useful. The precedents of awards are clearly and concisely drawn. The arrangement of chapters is conveniently managed. The law is clearly stated, and, so far as we can judge, all the important cases bearing directly on the subject are given, while the index appears reasonably copious. These facts, combined with the smallness of the volume, ought to make the book a success."—Law Journal.

DIXON'S LAW OF PARTNERSHIP.A TREATISE ON THE LAW OF PARTNERSHIP.

By J. DIXON, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Editor of "Lush's Common Law Practice." 1 vol. 8vo. 22s. cloth. 1866

"He has evidently bestowed upon this book the same conscientious labour and painstaking industry for which we had to compliment him some months since, when reviewing his edition of 'Lush's Practice of the Superior Courts of Law,' and, as a result, he has produced a clearly written and well arranged manual upon one of the most important branches of our mercantile law."—Law Journal.

"Mr. Lindley's view of the subject is that of a philosophical lawyer. Mr. Dixon's is purely and exclusively practical from beginning to end. We imagine that very few questions are likely to come before the practitioner which Mr. Dixon's book will not be found to solve. We have only to add, that the value of the book is very materially increased by an excellent marginal summary and a very copious index."—Law Magazine and Review.

MICHAEL & WILL'S GAS AND WATER SUPPLY.

Second Edition.

THE LAW RELATING TO GAS AND WATER: comprising the Rights and Duties, as well of Local Authorities as of Private Companies in regard thereto, and including all Legislation to the close of the last Session of Parliament. Second Edition. By W. H. MICHAEL and J. SHIRESS WILL, of the Middle Temple, Esqs., Barristers-at-Law. 8vo. 25s. cloth. 1877

"The Law of Gas and Water, by Messrs. Michael and Will, has reached a second edition, and the authors tell us that they have not only brought the law down to the present time but they have re-written a considerable portion of the text, particularly with reference to gas. When the first edition appeared we expressed an opinion that the work had been executed with care, skill and ability. This edition is a decided improvement on the first, and therefore we need add nothing now. It is a work which has probably found its way into the hands of all interested in the practical application of the Acts of Parliament relating to gas and water supply."—Law Times.

DAVIS ON REGISTRATION.—Second Edition. With Supplement.

PLUMPTRE ON THE LAW OF CONTRACTS.

A SUMMARY OF THE PRINCIPLES OF THE LAW OF SIMPLE CONTRACTS. By CLAUDE C. M. PLUMPTRE, of the Middle Temple, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. (Middle Temple Common Law Scholar, Hilary Term, 1877.) Post 8vo. 8s. cloth. 1879

* * A Companion Work to Underhill on Torts.

"In our last volume we had occasion to mention with approbation two works by Mr. Arthur Underhill, A Summary of the Law of Torts, and a Concise Manual of the Law relating to Trusts and Trustees; the first of these had reached a second edition, and in its preparation the author of the present work was associated with Mr. Underhill. In the preparation of this book Mr. Plumptre has adopted the lines laid down by Mr. Underhill; by means of short rules and sub-rules he presents a summary of the leading principles relating to the law of simple contracts, with the decisions of the Courts by which they are illustrated. Part I. deals with the parties to a simple contract, and treats of those persons exempted from the performance of their contracts by reason of incapacity, such as infants, married women, lunatics, drunkards, convicts and bankrupts. Chapter 4 is devoted to contracts by corporations and by agents, and the following chapter to partners and partnerships generally.

"In Part II. we have the constituent parts of a simple contract, the consent of the parties, the consideration, the promise, contracts illegal at common law and by statute, and fraudulent contracts.

"Part III. gives rules for making a simple contract, and treats of contracts within the 4th and 17th sections of the Statute of Frauds; Statutes of Limitation; the discharge of the obligation imposed by the contract by performance; by mutual agreement; by accord and satisfaction; and by operation of law; oral evidence and written contracts; damages; and contracts made abroad.

"The book contains upwards of one hundred rules, all ably illustrated by cases, and a very full and well-compiled index facilitates reference. It is more particularly addressed to students, but practitioners of both branches of the legal profession will find it a useful and trustworthy guide."

BARRY'S PRACTICE OF CONVEYANCING.

A TREATISE on the PRACTICE of CONVEYANCING. By W. WHITTAKER BARRY, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, late holder of the Studentship of the Inns of Court, and Author of "The Statutory Jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery." 8vo. 18s. cloth. 1865

"This treatise supplies a want which has long been felt. Mr. Barry's work is essentially what it professes to be, a treatise on the practice of conveyancing, in which the theoretical rules of real property law are referred to only for the purpose of elucidating the practice.

The treatise is the production of a person of great merit and still greater promise."—Solicitors' Journal.

"The work is clearly and agreeably written, and ably elucidates the subject in hand."—Justice of the Peace.

ELMES, of the Inner Temple, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Post 8vo. 12s. cloth. 1869

"Whether for companies taking land or holding it, Mr. Ingram's volume will be a welcome guide. With this in his hand the legal adviser of a company, or of an owner and occupier whose property is taken, and who demands compensation for it, cannot fail to perform his duty rightly."—Law Times.

"This work appears to be carefully prepared as regards its matter. This edition is a third larger than the first; it contains twice as many cases, and an enlarged index. It was much called for and doubtless will be found very useful by the practitioner."—Law Magazine.

OKE'S MAGISTERIAL SYNOPSIS.—Thirteenth Edit.

THE MAGISTERIAL SYNOPSIS : a Practical Guide for Magistrates, their Clerks, Solicitors, and Constables; comprising Summary Convictions and Indictable Offences, with their Penalties, Punishments, Procedure, &c.; alphabetically and tabularly arranged: with a Copious Index. Thirteenth Edition, much enlarged. By THOMAS W. SAUNDERS, Esq., Metropolitan Police Magistrate. In 2 vols. 8vo. 63s. cloth; 73s. calf. 1881

“Twelve editions in twenty-eight years say more for the practical utility of this work than any number of favourable reviews. Yet we feel bound to accord to the learned Recorder of Bath the praise of having fully maintained in the present edition the well-earned reputation of this useful book.”—Law Magazine.

“The industrious, capable and painstaking Recorder of Bath (Mr. T. W. Saunders) has edited the twelfth edition of Oke's Magisterial Synopsis. The law administered by magistrates, like almost every other branch of our jurisprudence, goes on growing almost every day of the legal year, and a new edition of such a work as this every few years means no small amount of labour on the part of the editor. We are glad to see that Mr. Saunders has bestowed great care in the revision of the index, which is now a feature in the work.”—Law Times.

OKE'S HANDY BOOK OF THE GAME LAWS.—3rd Ed.

A HANDY BOOK OF THE GAME LAWS; containing the whole Law as to Game, Licences and Certificates, Gun Licences, Poaching Prevention, Trespass, Rabbits, Deer, Dogs, Birds and Poisoned Grain, Sea Birds, Wild Birds, and Wild Fowl, and the Rating of Game throughout the United Kingdom. Systematically arranged, with the Acts, Decisions, Notes and Forms, &c. Third Edition. With Supplement to 1881, containing the Wild Birds Protection Act, 1880, and the Ground Game Act, 1880. By J. W. WILLIS BUND, M.A., LL.B., of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister-at-Law; Vice-Chairman of the Severn Fishery Board. Post 8vo. 16s. cloth. 1881

* * * The Supplement may be had separately, 2s. 6d. sewed.

“A book on the Game Laws, brought up to the present time, and including the recent acts with regard to wild fowl, &c., was much needed, and Mr. Willis Bund has most opportunely supplied the want by bringing out a revised and enlarged edition of the very useful handy book of which the late Mr. Oke was the author.”—The Field.

“The editorship of the present publication has, we are happy to say, fallen into such able hands as those of Mr. Willis Bund. In conclusion, we would observe that the present edition of the above work will be found by legal men or others who require any reliable information on any subject connected with the game laws, of the greatest practical utility, and that landed proprietors, farmers, and sportsmen will find ‘Oke's Game Laws’ an invaluable addition to their libraries, and an easy means of enlightening themselves on a subject which closely affects them.”—Land and Water.

OKE'S MAGISTERIAL FORMULIST.—Sixth Edition.

THE MAGISTERIAL FORMULIST: being a Complete Collection of Forms and Precedents for practical use in all Cases out of Quarter Sessions, and in Parochial Matters, by Magistrates, their Clerks, Attornies and Constables. By GEORGE C. OKE. Sixth Edition, enlarged and improved. By THOMAS W. SAUNDERS, Esq., Metropolitan Police Magistrate. In 1 vol. 8vo. 38s. cloth; 43s. calf. 1881

"Mr. Saunders has not been called upon to perform the functions of an annotator merely. He has had to create, just as Mr. Oke created when he wrote his book. This, of course, has necessitated the enlargement and remodelling of the index. No work probably is in more use in the offices of magistrates than 'Oke's Formulist.' That it should be reliable and comprehend recent enactments is of the very first importance. In selecting Mr. Saunders to follow in the steps of Mr. Oke the publishers exercised wise discretion, and we congratulate both author and publishers upon the complete and very excellent manner in which this edition has been prepared and is now presented to the profession."—Law Times.

CLERKE AND BRETT'S CONVEYANCING AND LAW OF PROPERTY ACT, 1881, &c.—Second Edition.

THE CONVEYANCING AND LAW OF PROPERTY ACT, 1881, together with the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, and the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881. With Notes and an Introduction. By AUBREY ST. JOHN CLERKE, B.A., late Scholar and Student of Trinity College, Dublin, and THOMAS BRETT, LL.B. London University, B.A., late Scholar and Student of Trinity College, Dublin, Exhibitioner in Real Property and Equity, and Holder of the First Certificate of Honour, Michaelmas, 1869; both of the Middle Temple, Esquires, Barristers-at-Law. Second Edition. Post 8vo. 7s. 6d. cloth. 1882

"The chief objects of this work, the authors state in their preface, are—(1) To point out the various changes which have been introduced by the new Act into the law and practice of conveyancing; (2) to criticize the provisions of the Act, pointing out difficulties likely to arise, and suggesting means to evade those difficulties; (3) to render the work as convenient as possible for the purpose of reference, by furnishing the reader with a comprehensive index and a complete table of cases. These objects appear to have been attained. The introductory chapter deals with the effect of the Act in a masterly manner, and shows that the authors are intimately acquainted with the subject in hand. Each section of this important Act is then dealt with fully, and its effect on the existing law explained, great pains being taken to call attention to the clauses which are, and those which are not, of retrospective operation; and the work concludes with a consideration of the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874 (which is, of course, closely connected with the new Act), and the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881. The work is written, no doubt, mainly for the practitioner, but the student who is reading for examination next year will require an accurate knowledge of this Act, and it is very doubtful whether he will be able to meet with a better treatise on it than that contained in the pages being considered."—Gibson's Final.

"It is not possible to exaggerate the utility of the work brought out by Messrs. Clerke and Brett. No student or practitioner who desires to be acquainted with the latest phase of real property legislation ought to be without it. The authors are to be congratulated upon the speed with which they have brought out the volume."—Law Examination Journal.

* * * Being a Supplement to the Second Edition of the work by the same Authors on the "Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881."
